11:22 PM

Before the founding deities arrived on Rithmia an ancient species known as the Yith and the primordials, beings of pure elements, were the two sole inhabitants of this region of the universe for thousands (possibly millions) of years.

The Yith would seem "alien" today because their natural habitat is one of when the planet was a rolling boil still cooling.

However they left the planet without a trace just a few decades before the gods arrived as the primordials continued to grow and split into more different forms.

Originally Rithmia was the playground for Gaia, The Allmother and it is unclear whether or not they uncovered evidence of this species. If she did or not no details were shared with any other deities.

Once Gaia arrived pre containment they spawned twelve original beasts as well as created her two heralds to rule over plant and animal life on the entire planet. A peaceful garden of livestock who lived alongside the elemental primordials.

Yith'Zizctal is a primordial word. It means Alien (Yith) Spiraling Death (Zizctal) The Allmother was the first to speak this name when the encroching old one came hurling towards the solar system from the outer realm.

Age of Creation (12,000BD - 8,500BD)

Sunday, January 15, 2023 12:59 PM

Important events of the age:

All primordials are "sealed" to create the raw substance of the elemental energy planes.

Some descendants of these primordials were able to hide away through various means and later evolved into the giants we know today.

Xintris, The Weaver begins construction of the weave in order to allow controlled access to arcane abilities that are granted to the people of the material plane by the extraplanar energies entering through vortexes all around the world.

Mortals were placed as one group with many variations on the planet of Rithmia as it was the center of the solar system. Each ancestry seen by the gods as altered parameters in a grand unsupervised learning problem. They were placed on Yadrela, An island that is essentially point nemo the furthest landmass from any main continent. The purpose of mortal creatures was up to interpretation and each deity took the basic physiological blueprint created by Ados, The Architect and began to mold it as they pleased.

The gods had different ideas of what these mortals should be and how "free" they should be.

As they could not decide Gaia, The Allmother birthed new animals and unconscious life like the trees as well. However, the weave was a natural barrier to extraplanar forces they wished to block out from the far realm.

The fey realm is sometimes called the prime world as it is where deities could spawn "rough drafts" of beasts and mortals.

Legend of Containment (~8,500PD)

Sunday, December 3, 2023 10:22 AM

In a time before ages shortly after The Evacuation of the Yith, during the Age of Creation where each of the 10 original deities where terraforming a planet of their own, coming into their power -- The Unspeakable One awoke. Still groggy this being stretched in the early morning of the universe and its violet light began to spread across all realms of reality. In spite of its nature as a facet of reality the light stopped in a large region of the material plane. The 10 prime deities were holding back the purple light from their new creations, the Rithmiasphere. Agitated by this an idea sprang from The Unspeakable and its first spawn was born. The idea was a creature that could eradicate anything in its path and thus Yith'Zizctal, The Consumer was born. The immovable object was about to meet an unstoppable force and a winner would be decided as Yith'Zizctal rush at near the speed of light at the Rithmiasphere.

Yith'Zizctal has the unique ability to consume a being and wipe all trace of it from existence. Their name may not be said and mention of them is wiped from memory of any mortal being and even in books that make reference to them have the name erased from its pages. This is because all mentions of them are transported to the demiplane that occupies the interior of The Consumer's stomach called Hunger's Void.

The creator gods of the Rithmiasphere were put on the defensive. They recognized the danger they were in as the great old one dashed towards their solar system. A plan had to be made to slay the creature.

To begin with the plan Ados and Caldor forged 6 mighty pillars of black stone. These were given to Zeisis, The Reaper who then acupunctured them into Rithmia's surface which Gaia volunteered to give up in order to create a prison for the creature. They planned to seal the creature inside the planet for all eternity. The rest of the prime deities fought Yith'Zizctal until the great old one was able to consume ___ and ___ then shattered the crystal sphere, a metaphysical barrier surrounding the solar system, and carried on with the fight. Xinthris then was forced to abandon the fight and hold together a tear in reality caused by two deities being erased from existence. This fractured Xinthris' mind as they peered into the realm beyond, the Outer realm, causing the once calm cool collected deity of magic into their now chaotic state.

Gharian and Caldor fought side by side while Asmodeus engineered an eternally binding contract to seal this foul beast away. Gaia, known as The Allmother until this moment, split herself into two parts (The Earth and The Hypogean) and ripped the Mouth of Rithmia open. Ados healed Xinthris mind best they could and in a joint effort these two crafted a demiplanar prison the size of the core of Rithmia using a material Caldor created. Xinthris meticulously crafted an abjuration to contain this mighty creature who's stomach is also a demiplane. Once weakened by the two greatest warriors of the prime deities, Gharian and Caldor who both suffered intense, everlasting wounds Zeisis attempted to rip The Consumer's soul from its body. To their horror there was no one soul but an amalgamation of smaller pieces that constantly grew and replaced themselves healing and growing The Consumer every minute. These gigantic insectoid cells of Yith'Zizctal later became known as the scourge and in his foolishness Zeisis scattered The Scourge across the surface of Rithmia. However, this did greatly weaken the creature and over the Mouth of The World Janus dealt the final banishing judgment to Yith'Zizctal. The demiplanar prison was then locked by Asmodeus who has kept the key at his side ever since.

Now around the world 6 ancient pillars of black stone that pierce 500ft in the air serve as the material anchor for the planar forcecage preventing Yith'Zizctal from escaping their prison.

Once the great purple light of The Unspeakable One, an outer god of pure entropy, literally the purple light of the visible light spectrum hit a barrier which it could not breach it became upset. Spawning from this anger was his first creation that walked separate from him. Later known as Yith'Zizctal, The Consumer this great old one ripped through space at an ungodly speed hurling itself towards the Rithmiasphere. Ten deities stood their ground against this fowl beast and from a certain perspective, they lost. The beast was not slain, just trapped in one of the planets of their new precious solar system.

The Consumer has the ability to swallow all aspects of anything, meaning its history was wiped away as well as its physical essence. Two deities were entirely consumed. Only 8 deities were left standing, 5 of which were seriously injured. Gaia split herself into two: The Earth, and The Undergrowth. Only the deities of Law: Asmodeus, Janus, and Ados suffered no long term damage from this battle. Gharian took the largest damage and now sits on a throne, like a mixture of the statue of zeus and the emperor of man, using all of his remaining power to keep the sun lit and happiness and joy available to mortals. This battle and sealing is known as the Legend of Containment

Lasting effects on the deities.

Gaia: Split into two weakened aspects The Earth and the Hypogean
Caldor: Lost one hand and shattered his original axe. Pieces of which are discovered by mortals as a great Godmetal on the planet.
Gharian: Allmight like injury he is nearly paralyzed. Barely able to keep the light of the dawn bright enough he sits on a golden throne which keeps him alive much like the emperor of mankind in 40K. Xinthris: Mind fractured while holding together a tear in reality. Possibly had an encounter with The Unspeakable One or one of the other elder gods of the outer realm. This pushed them to create mortals with freewill that could grow in strength and possibly defend this realm if The Consumer were to ever break free of its prison
Zeisis: In an attempt to rip The Consumer's soul from his body he help spread The Scourge across the surface of all the planets in the Rithmia sphere. Zeisis had to use an immense amount of their power to create all the psychopomps and while they weren't fractured like Gaia they were personally now bound to the River of souls and their lesser servants had to do the bidding of the once omnipresent Reaper

The First Flood (8,500PD - 8,400PD)

Sunday, December 3, 2023 10:11 AM

The First flood refers to a Solar system wide event that followed the legend of containment. During the fight with The Consumer as damage was done to this alien being the chunks of flesh that were cut off were living insectoid cells called the scourge which have the sole purpose of surviving, growing, assimilating strong creatures and reattaching to Yith'Zizctal drawing them to the core of Rithmia.

During this time the heralds and original (non-mortal) creations of the deities spread across the solar system to wipe out The Scourge, alien beings born from the boiling mass of Yith'Zizctal.

They were "successful" in the idea that The Scourge did not wipe out all life in the Rithmiasphere. However, it seems on Rithmia due to "The Heartbeat of The Consumer" The Scourge seem to never truly die. They shatter in to small pink crystals and seep into the ground like a malevolent fertilizer. After enough light of The Unspeakable fertilizes these crystals and they are kept alive by the heartbeat of The Consumer the scourge spring forth once more in an attempt to assimilate all life in the Rithmiasphere to be a part of The Unspeakables light.

Creation of Mortals (~8,400PD)

Thursday, November 2, 2023 10:37 PM

After The Cataclysm it was decided that if the gods were to survive they would need to create mortal souls who could assist them in future battles. A debate over giving their creations freewill lasted a full month. Some of these gods had seen first-hand what happens when nothing binds the soul. Others believed nothing should ever bind the soul and the lack of creativity would create a dull world. Backroom deals, between good and neutral deities, pushed the tide towards granting free will to make it possible for these creations to be as strong as they were.

Here thoughts, and consciousness were breathed into mortal creation for the first time.

Mortals were placed as one on the planet of Rithmia, each ancestry seen by the gods as altered parameters in a grand supervised learning problem. They were place on Yadrela, An island that is essentially point nemo the furthest landmass from any main continent.

Primal Age (8,500BD - 7,500BD)

5:27 PM

The entirety of mortalkind was on the island of Yadrela during this period

Important events of the age:

Age of Division (7,500BD - 5,000BD)

Tuesday, October 17, 2023 11:58 AM

Long after mortals sailed away from Yadrella three kingdoms grew and dominated. These three were constantly in a three way Cold War with lots of espionage and tactical shifts.

Kingdoms of land (naturalistic spiritualists, occult themes and lots of Druids)

- Each new continent was settled by different groups who "outgrew" the starting island of Yadrella.
- The names of each continent are the names of the great Kingdoms of Land that initially settled each continent.

Kingdom of water (heavy capitalists riddled with greed, also raid the other two kingdoms)

Subterranean kingdom (intellectuals lots of wizards and artificers also a mostly communist society where people are assigned roles at a ritual of maturity like in the giver) Ancient Najara, once contacted by extraplanar creatures made advancements in science and magic and became victorious in this millennia long Cold War

All out war was halted when Lemos negotiated the longest standing peace treaty of the era. Possibly stopping complete annihilation on all sides who would release all arcane power available.

War became active between the Kingdoms of Land and Water leading to arcane weapons of mass destruction being tested and threatened to be used.

Ki'Una's story lands here as she was from the Kingdom of Water and fell in love with an Archivist from the Kingdom of Land.

Ended due to Open air crusade where the underground coalition of Najara, dao, and xiomorns who conquered a majority of the population. This led to the Reptilian age where the Najaran Empire spread around the world and the underdark was turned over to the Dao and Xiomorns who then molded the underdark from a vast series of cavern to a interconnected web of traversable tunnels.

Azula:

Azula was an empire largely made of Animalfolk who sought new geographic areas that suited their lifestyle. They felt most connection to Gaia and thus had heavy ideals of naturalism, cultivation, and preservation. They were expert fisherman which is partially what led to the Tidevault empires animosity towards them.

Reptilian age (5,000BD - 2,500BD)

Tuesday, October 17, 2023 11:59 AM

Began after the Open Air Crusades where subterranean creatures breached land at the end of age of division reptilian creatures ruled all aspects of the globe land, sea, underdark, only the dragons ruled the sky. Slowly Najara and xiomorns left the material plane seeking other planets and planes as their technology advanced and left their mass of creature experiments to roam the underdark.

Most of the worldwide Najara Empire was either killed by the scourge or fled to the outer planes and even different planets in and around the Rithmiasphere. Leaving behind few reptilian ancestors who diverged evolutionarily which is why we have different races now like yuan-ti, snakefolk, lizardfolk to name a few.

It is important to note that Reptilian humanoids were not the only species alive during this age they were just the vast majority. Of all mortal life on the planet the Reptilians made up roughly 75% of the population. They held an over 85% majority on all continents except Bretoa due to their distaste of its naturally cold climate.

Ended due to scourge invasion

Empty Eon (2,500BD - 1,200BD)

Friday, December 29, 2023 8:26 PM

Najarans fled to other planes and planets after discovering what lies at the core of Rithmia. Global population is reduced by approximately 90% as Najarans flee and their arcane secrets "break free" of their underground prisons. Things like the father of spiders and other experiments run wild in the surface world for the first time.

Rise in religion. Many monasteries still standing today were built in this era.

Dragons hermit away in small packs / nuclear families grow in power and strength but also develop their own innate magic power. The first draconic bloodlines have their origins in this reclusive era.

Giant tribes start to run wild and expand their territory. Previously enslaved to the Snakefolk via mind control.

Age of Elemental Lords (1,200BD - 50BD)

Thursday, November 2, 2023 11:47 PM

Just before the elemental war

Odyssey of the dragonlords https://online.anyflip.com/fgoih/xsrz/mobile/index.html#google_vignette

During this time the dragons who had herniated and grew in strength started to take positions of authority commanding entire countries instead of just fearmongering small folk who lived near their lairs.

There was also a “magical build up” in the inner planes as the chaos of the elemental chaos was expanding like a soup about to boil over. Tears from the material planes opened up around the world. Druids of the land gathered around these nexus’s and due to the excess magic energy pouring into these pools the first genasi were born. These are often deemed first generation (or derogatorily randos) as mortals who got too near the energy for too long were magically transformed. But remember at this time all elemental energies this did not make the first generation born of all the elements but instead one random one. Genasi with more than one elemental lineage were only able to be born after the Taming of the Elemental Chaos.

In the year 50BD the elemental chaos will be tamed taking another burden off Gaia's back

The Elemental War (50BD - 1BD)

Tuesday, December 27, 2022 11:28 PM

The Elemental War

Stone giants attempted to stay neutral as they did not want to participate in such a war and wanted to continue living life as it was. This neutrality inspired the one face to face meeting that was ever held. Shortly after the last primordial was defeated a council of war was held. Nobody knows what happened for sure but battle broke out and the center of glaushun was ground zero for a fight that would last centuries.

This war altered the world's landscape even further. Carving out a considerable chunk of land creating the sea of stars inland on the continent of Glaushun.

Giants

Giants had the most physical strength and only some of them had deep magic connections as the elements they were attuned to mostly bolstered their physical abilities. True Giants (titans in early D&D I think) retreated to their realm called Jotunheim. These true giants are incredibly adaptable to the elements and the many various types are a result of true giants adapting to their natural surroundings in whatever wandering tribe they found themselves in after the war as many of the giant empires were destroyed. Look up Jotun Giant in Tome of beasts 1

Genie's

Genie's had the strongest raw magic ability. They used their innate connection to the weave to create items and other strategies to overcome the physical strength of the giants and dragons. While each genie subset didn't necessarily have the exact same beliefs they were able to work together to create items that allowed them to achieve amazing things. The most notable was the hamilat aljazira (Island carrier) that is a mythallar. It is essentially a magic generator that constantly enchants a rare metal found in the center of the mountain they cut the peaks off and flip upside down to build cities on. This metal is a cobalt grey naturally however, the dijin and the dao combined their powers into the hamilat aljazira, a magic generator that is a pure silver color and generates a constant wind current that is pure arcane energy that penetrates the stone all around and enchanting the rare metal which lights up a fluorescent royal blue color, when enchanted the mountain can be raised into the sky. Small ones of these can be built in castles by powerful arcane users (new 9th level spell with after effects like wish). This blue color makes these islands sometimes hard to spot against the blue sky backdrop. The nature of the generator is a combination of mostly air and earth magic so it constantly pulls in air and transfers the wind energy to power the _____. This makes floating islands attract clouds as well as it sucks them in. Makes for well hydrated fertile soil as well. In the future the _____ will be scattered and a better aljazira will be made with science and will enable floating ships and small floating civilizations.

Genies pulled together their excessive magic power to create their own plane that resembled the world of Rithmia when the titans still reigned supreme. They divided it in four and now reside on the plane of altaaqat al'awalia. (Elemental energy).

Dragons

Dragons were the optimal combination of strength, cunning and magical ability That only grows with age. That is why they won plain and simple. This war lasted 400 years and none of the others have an extended lifespan to compete with dragons (genies can live up to 200 years, giants less than 100) Yellow dragons, fast, salt breathe weapon

Outcomes of the elemental war

With the dragons victorious the first age of Rithmia was brought to a close. These victorious dragons became the draconic pantheon. It also gave birth to new races related to these elemental warriors. Dragonborns, giant kin, and genasi (along with Panjaian) "True giants" retreated to their creator gods realm of jotunheim however giants still roam today. Dragons also still roam free. Some selfish chromatic dragons use the title of Ruler of the Elements even though they did not participate in the war and do not hold domain over any elements. Genie's are notably the one participant of this war that are (for the most part) not present on the prime material plane anymore. Nobody is quite sure of its origins but the genies were able to harness the ancient raw power of the pandemonium stone to create their own plane of existence, the elemental energy plane (see EEP section).

There is supposedly a Key of Stars hidden amongst one island; this key is said to have many powers. Ali believes that it will open the door to the elemental planes and allow genies to come forth and take their rightful place. He says the genies with their magic prowess left it behind before they officially lost the elemental war so they could one day return. In truth this opens a door to the far realm where aboltic sovereignty will try to come forth and reign terror over the whole world. It is scattered somewhere in the sea where it originally existed.

To compensate for these creatures now dominating aspects of life as the Elemental pantheon the original species were given access to the arcane via the weave. Elemental power was a raw and unrefined magic but the humanoid species were able to harness and refine it to a degree greater than any other on Rithmia. From this blossomed the first great empire of each civilization. This ended The Dawn and began an age where magic blossomed across the world later deemed The Esoteric Times.

Conclusion:

The end of the war was known as the Day of Dawn as the wars had created a permanent cloud of elemental chaos in the atmosphere and when the dragons were deemed victors and granted godhood over the primordial chaos (that the genies had shaped into a somewhat lawful domain). Gharian and Gaia parted the skies and raised three dragons and two genies to godhood. Granting them each a divine spark.

Overall to the mortal world it seemed like a fight to the death to see which candidates would ascend to minor deity status however secretly early on in the war all sides of the ensuing chaos were visited by a divine herald and told the truth while also sworn to secrecy. Due the Gaias serious injury the seals on the enemies of the Yith, The primordials were weakened. Ancient titans composed of different elements began to stir to life. Ancient artifacts from the sealing of the consumer scattered across the globe were the only things they believe were strong enough to slay or seal these primordials. They were tasked with finding these artifacts or becoming strong enough to overcome the titans without them. On the surface the fight to the death narrative was kept even though it makes little sense for divine beings to be the catalyst for a catastrophic 49 year long war

Artifacts of Extremity

Ring of winter type shit
Fire artifact could be asmodeus related
Lightning/thunder should be Gharian related
Acidic/poisonous ooze of the consumer itself

Terms of the battle:

The original terms agreed upon before the summit was that each faction would select 4 champions one for each element.

A dual of champions would be set, once agreed upon these 12 would battle until one side was declared the victor by Gaia herself.

However due to the nature of the sabotage of the summit and the breakout of war these champions turned into Generals and the date for a dual was never set. The rules of the agreement changed and only the holders of Extremity know what the new rules for victory are.

Giants Champions:

Now, considering that a summit was called to discuss the terms of this challenge but turned into a massive attack, I need to think about who might have initiated this attack and why.

Perhaps one faction was ambushed by another, or maybe there was a misunderstanding about the terms of the summit. Alternatively, maybe one faction thought they could gain an upper hand by striking first, believing they could defeat the others before they had a chance to defend themselves.

Let's consider that the Giants, being the oldest and most established faction, might have been seen as the current rulers. The Genies and Dragons might be challenging their authority, seeking to overthrow them and take control of the elements themselves.

Alternatively, maybe the weakened state of Gaia has caused a power vacuum, and all three factions see an opportunity to seize control.

In terms of the champions, perhaps there was a specific champion who was targeted or who initiated the attack, leading to the escalation of the war.

I should also consider the overall goals of each faction beyond just controlling the elements. For example, the Giants might want to preserve the natural order, the Genies might seek to harness the elements for their own purposes, and the Dragons might aim to dominate and subjugate the other factions.

Additionally, there might be neutral parties or other factions who are affected by this war and could potentially get involved, either to support one side or to try to broker peace.

I need to think about the world of Rithmia and how this war affects it. Are there human civilizations or other intelligent species who are caught in the crossfire? How do they view this conflict?

Moreover, since Gaia is the current deity of Nature and is weakened, there might be those who are trying to heal her or prevent her from dying, adding another layer to the conflict.

Perhaps some champions are not entirely behind the war and have their own agendas or moral qualms about fighting.

I should also consider the abilities and personalities of the champions to make them more distinct and interesting.

For example, Grundir Stoneheart might be very stoic and honorable, believing firmly in Giant traditions and the right to rule over Earth. In contrast, Lavaforge the Forger could be more volatile and passionate, seeing the war as a way to prove his worth and strength.

Similarly, Djinna of the Sands might be cunning and strategic, using her earth manipulation to outsmart opponents, while Ifrit Stormheart is impulsive and driven by passion.

Among the Dragons, Terrastron the Stoneshaper could be wise and ancient, while Pyrothorn the Flameheart is young and eager for battle.

Moreover, perhaps there are champions who are reluctant to fight or who see the destruction the war is causing and question whether this is the right path.

Additionally, there might be champions who form unexpected alliances across factions, recognizing common goals or personal friendships.

I should also think about the locations where the battles take place. Since the elements are central, perhaps each element has its own domain where the battles occur.

For example, earth battles might take place in mountains or caves, air battles in the skies or on high plateaus, fire battles in volcanoes or deserts, and water battles in the oceans or lakes.

Each champion would have their strengths and weaknesses depending on the domain of battle.

Furthermore, perhaps certain champions have abilities that allow them to manipulate multiple elements, giving them an edge in certain situations.

Alternatively, maybe there are artifacts or magical items that can enhance a champion's powers or grant them control over additional elements.

I should also consider the role of magic in this world. Is magic widely available, or is it rare and controlled by certain factions?

Moreover, how do the common people of Rithmia view this war? Are they supportive of their faction's champions, or do they fear the destruction that comes with the conflict?

Perhaps there are factions or groups that are trying to broker peace or find a different solution to the succession of the elements.

Alternatively, maybe some see this as an opportunity to gain power for themselves, perhaps by supporting one faction over the others.

I should also think about the timeline of events leading up to the summit and the subsequent war.

Maybe there were preliminary challenges or trials that the champions had to undergo to be selected as representatives of their factions.

Perhaps there were diplomatic efforts before the summit, with messengers being sent between factions to discuss terms.

Then, at the summit, something went wrong. Maybe there was a misunderstanding, a betrayal, or an outside influence that caused the attack to happen.

Alternatively, perhaps one faction was secretly preparing an ambush, believing it to be the only way to secure victory.

I need to decide which faction initiated the attack to better understand the dynamics of the war.

However due to the nature of the sabotage of the summit and the breakout of war these champions turned into Generals and the date for a dual was never set. The rules of the agreement changed and only the holders of Extremity know what the new rules for victory are.

Giants Champions:

- Earth Champion: Grundir Stoneheart
 - o A massive Giant with skin like granite. He can manipulate earth and stone, creating walls, tunnels, and even causing earthquakes.
 - o Motivation: To prove that the Giants are the most connected to the earth and deserve to rule over it.
- Fire Champion: Fahrenor the Forger
 - o A Giant with lava flowing in his veins. He can control fire and heat, forging weapons and armor from molten rock.
 - o Motivation: To show that fire is a purifying force and that only the strongest deserve to control it.
- Air Champion: Skyreach the Windspeaker
 - o A Cloud Giant with feathers instead of hair, able to control the winds and breathe in the thin air of high altitudes.
 - o Motivation: To demonstrate that air is the most vital element and that Giants, with their large lungs, are best suited to control it.
- Water Champion: Tidecaller the Floodbringer
 - o A Storm Giant who can manipulate water, causing floods and tides to obey his commands. He has gills and can breathe underwater.
 - o Motivation: To assert that water is the source of life and that Giants, with their connection to rivers and lakes, should govern it.

Genies Faction:

- Earth Champion: Djinna of the Sands
 - o A powerful Earth Genie who can manipulate sand and soil, creating powerful sandstorms and earth tremors.
 - o Motivation: To prove that Genies are more adaptable and thus better rulers over the elements.
- Fire Champion: Ifrit Stormheart
 - o A Fire Genie who can control flames and heat, summoning infernos and volcanic eruptions.
 - o Motivation: To show that fire is the most destructive and therefore the most respected element, making Ifrits natural leaders.
- Air Champion: Djinn Windrunner
 - o An Air Genie who can control the winds, fly at incredible speeds, and even manipulate weather patterns.
 - o Motivation: To demonstrate that air is the most pervasive element, reaching everywhere, making Air Genies the ideal rulers.
- Water Champion: Marid Tidecaller
 - o A Water Genie who can command the oceans, create tsunamis, and breathe underwater.
 - o Motivation: To assert that water is the most essential element for life and that Water Genies should govern its distribution and use.

Dragons Faction:

- Earth Dragon: Holdrovo the Stoneshaper
 - o An Brown Dragon who can manipulate stone and earth, creating powerful barriers and causing earthquakes.
 - o Motivation: To establish Dragon dominance over all elements, starting with Earth.
- Fire Dragon: Ieldrog the Flameheart
 - o A Red Dragon with intense heat and the ability to breathe fire, capable of igniting vast areas.
 - o Motivation: To prove that Fire Dragons are the most powerful and thus deserve to rule over all elements.
- Air Dragon: Aerowind the Skymaster
 - o An Silver Dragon who can control winds and fly at incredible heights, manipulating weather to suit his needs.
 - o Motivation: To assert Air Dragons' superiority due to their ability to traverse any terrain and control the skies.
- Water Dragon: Fyrmolun the Tidebinder
 - o A Water Dragon who can manipulate water, create storms, and breathe underwater, controlling seas and rivers.
 - o Motivation: To claim that Water Dragons are the most versatile and therefore the most suitable rulers over all elements.

Alternatively, perhaps one faction was secretly preparing an ambush, believing it to be the only way to secure victory.

I need to decide which faction initiated the attack to better understand the dynamics of the war.

Let's consider that the Genies were planning the ambush, believing that they had the upper hand and could quickly defeat the other factions before they could react.

Alternatively, maybe the Dragons struck first, seeing the summit as an opportunity to take out their main opponents in one fell swoop.

Or perhaps the Giants, feeling threatened by the rising power of the Genies and Dragons, decided to preemptively strike to maintain their dominance.

Regardless of who started it, the attack would have escalated tensions and led to a full-scale war.

Now, in terms of the champions, perhaps some of them were against the attack or didn't agree with their faction's decision, which could lead to internal conflicts or defections.

For example, maybe Skyreach the Windspeaker disagreed with the Giants' decision to attack and tried to warn the other champions, leading to a rift within the Giants faction.

Similarly, perhaps Marid Tidecaller had misgivings about the Genies' plan and sought a different path.

Alternatively, some champions might be enthusiastic about the war, seeing it as an opportunity to prove themselves or to gain personal power.

In terms of the story, I could have a protagonist who is a champion from one faction who questions the morality of the war or who seeks to end the conflict.

This protagonist could be torn between their loyalty to their faction and their conscience, leading to a compelling character arc.

Alternatively, the protagonist could be a neutral party, perhaps a human wizard or a nature spirit, who tries to broker peace or find a way to heal Gaia.

Moreover, perhaps there are relics or prophecies that suggest a way to prevent Gaia's death or to choose a new deity of Nature in a more peaceful manner.

The champions could be seeking these relics or trying to fulfill the prophecies, leading to both cooperation and conflict among them.

Additionally, there might be dark forces or ancient evils that are trying to take advantage of the chaos caused by the war to further their own agendas.

This would add another layer of complexity to the story, with the champions having to deal not only with each other but also with these external threats.

In terms of the world-building, I should think about the geography of Rithmia. Are there specific locations that are sacred to the elements, such as elemental temples or wellsprings of power?

These locations could be targets for the factions, each seeking to control them to gain an advantage in the war.

Moreover, perhaps certain elements are more prevalent in certain regions, influencing the local ecology and civilizations.

For example, areas dominated by Earth element might have rich mineral deposits and robust agricultural lands, while Air-dominated regions could have floating islands or high mountain ranges.

Fire-dominated areas might be deserts or volcanic landscapes, and Water-dominated areas would be vast oceans or lush rainforests.

I should also consider how the elements interact with each other. For instance, Fire and Water are opposites, and their champions might have natural enmity, while Earth and Water might have a more symbiotic relationship.

This could influence alliances or rivalries among the champions.

Furthermore, perhaps there are magical techniques or rituals that allow champions to temporarily borrow powers from another element, creating versatile fighters.

Alternatively, maybe some champions have innate abilities that allow them to manipulate multiple elements, making them particularly powerful.

In terms of the story, perhaps the key to ending the war lies in uniting the four elements in harmony, which could only be achieved by a champion who can master all four elements.

This could be the ultimate goal of the protagonist, leading them on a quest to learn from masters of each element and overcome personal challenges to achieve balance.

Alternatively, maybe the only way to prevent Gaia's death is to perform a ritual that requires the combined power of all four elements, which would require the champions to set aside their differences and work together.

This could lead to a climactic battle where the champions must cooperate to defeat a greater threat that is exploiting the chaos of the war.

Another possibility is that one of the champions discovers that the prophecy is a trap set by a malevolent force, and that choosing new elemental gods will have catastrophic consequences for Rithmia.

This champion could then try to warn the others and find a different solution to save Gaia and maintain the balance of nature.

In terms of character development, each champion could have their own arcs and growth throughout the story.

For example, a young and impetuous Fire Dragon champion could learn the value of patience and strategy, while an Earth Giant champion could discover the importance of adaptability.

Moreover, perhaps some champions will form unlikely friendships or romances across faction lines, adding emotional depth to the story.

Additionally, there could be mentors or elders from each faction who provide wisdom and guidance to the champions, helping them navigate the complexities of the war and their own motivations.

In terms of the plot, I could structure the story around a series of elemental trials or battles, each representing a test of the champions' abilities and resolve.

As the story progresses, the champions would gradually uncover the truth behind the prophecy and the true cause of Gaia's weakening, leading to a final confrontation where they must make difficult choices to save their world.

Moreover, perhaps there are secrets about the Prime Pantheon or the nature of divinity that are revealed throughout the story, challenging the champions' beliefs and forcing them to question what it means to be a god.

In conclusion, The Elemental War on Rithmia is a complex conflict driven by the ambitions of three powerful factions: the Giants, the Genies, and the Dragons. Each faction has four champions representing the elements of Earth, Air, Fire, and Water, all vying to become the new elemental gods as Gaia, the current deity of Nature, lies weakened and near death.

The war was ignited by a treacherous attack at a summit meant to discuss the terms of this challenge, escalating into a full-scale conflict that threatens the balance of Rithmia. Amidst the chaos, champions from each faction grapple with their roles, their loyalties, and the true meaning of power and leadership.

As the war rages on, the fate of the world hangs in the delicate balance of elemental forces, awaiting a resolution that could restore harmony or plunge Rithmia into eternal discord.

Age of myth (OPD - 2,900PD)

Tuesday, October 17, 2023 12:04 PM

Began at the end of the elemental war

Ended when elemental vortexes and all other means of planar travel were sealed to prevent extraplanar invasion.

This is the base era for most of the standard D&D games in this setting will be run

Key points:

This is a mythical age of nearly three thousand years with these set dates so go wild with the setting of your campaign given the following guidelines:

- Dragons came out on top of the war so most of the early empires are led by dragon's. These pockets of grand civilization have unique cultures depending on the dragons who rule them. Some metallic dragons create the first orders of knights/paladins cultivating cultures based on honor, and truths (a place like this is where we find a young Torm who befriends a golden dragon as a young boy). Other's become the first tyrants creating harsh environments where only those puny mortals they favor may survive (think the obsidian dragon who wipes out the red dragons in western Glaushun and enslaves any fire resistant race specifically the fire giants who held the land and dominated some dragons themselves previously. Finally certain dragons bolster a nation of intelligence and forward thinking (like our silver dragon who founds the Master Library in Glaushun after his best friend / lover the mist dragon passes).
- Giants civilization is broken and there is no unity amongst the different giant races like there was during the war. The infighting over who is the dominant race becomes a cornerstone of their culture. Some still hold that they need to regroup and tear down these dragon overlords but can never quite bolster enough support amongst all the races.
- Genie's almost all retreat into the EEP through newly created elemental vortices that stay behind permanently in the material plane. Elemental power seeps into the land around these portals and Eun'sur, monks, and other scholars gather around to harness their power. Children born near these vortices have a chance of being born with a deep genetic tie to the elements and the first Genasi start being born in Rithmia.
- Rithmia is full a high fantasy setting, go nuts but realize the 8 Prime gods are real and are playing nearly 15000 year game of chess against an eldritch outer god.
- Use the Worldwide Factions wherever necessary throughout this age.
- Throughout this age the Pillars of Restraint will fall one by one. Starting with the Pillar of the coast of Azula allowing the Kaiju Primagaru to be released near the continent where it sought to destroy the World Tree

OPD - 200PD:

- Dark ages / rebuilding period
 - o Elders of the elemental war die off, leave behind remnants of nations that only knew war for 50 years (that's like 1-2 generation that changes people and brings about the survival mindset of the period). Some areas will be in ruin, some will be better off, but no one will be overly prosperous so rebuilding from scratch is needed.
 - o Think bronze age collapse.
 - o Transition Catalyst: With the defeat of Tiamat and the birth of three new demigods the masses begin to learn to rebuild instead of

200PD - 700PD

- Medieval age / growth of city-states
 - o First large city states begin to prosper across the various continents
 - o Growth in religions of all kinds inspired by two facts: Three new demigods have been "born", maybe you could be next to be "dosen"
 - o Transition Catalyst: Eun'sur grow in influence in rural areas and begin encouraging the harvesting of Elemental Vortices.
 - Transition of influence from the end of this age and beginning of next from Druid -> Monk -> Wizard.
 - Druid have strong oral traditions, Monks write those traditions down and then Wizards take over monasteries and codify them (or in some cases steal the written works and then teach them to the masses in mage academies).

- Magical Renaissance / Renaissance / Rise of nations
 - o Aetherpunk / magicpunk themes.
 - Still medieval inspired but it is a world of magic, airships (powered by Brumestone) and heavy Elemental energy influence
 - In this age the "power" comes from the elements
 - Magical inventions should be all around think like galliotopters from worlds beyond number, magic cellphones, etc.
 - o City's group together into large nations
 - o Power is displayed via Arcane prowess and magical affinity
 - Oligarchy of mages and Mageocracy should be a dominant form of government through Rithmia. As well as powerful theocracies where great paladins, clerics, sorcerers of divine blood rule devout nations.
 - o Sorcerous bloodlines rule in parts of the world. Mage Academies and Bardic colleges become cornerstones of large cities
 - o Transition catalyst: Overharvesting of elements and elemental vortices destabilize the planet's magical current (The Weave) causing natural disasters and resource scarcity.
 - Discovery of Etherite leads nations near the iron mountains to begin to electrically power their cities and become powerhouse nations. Arcane ability will no longer be the only way for cities to be "powered" leading to a common man renaissance.

- Modern / Steampunk
 - o Etherite is spread the world over as a main power source.
 - o Etherite's steam powered machines dominate new markets as steam replaces pure elemental energy.
 - o Most faith's begin to dwindle in popularity as cleric/paladin power in terms of guard / warfare is taken up by the common man and machinery.
 - o Factories, clockwork automatons, and brass gadgets dominant the streets.
 - o Pollution, deforestation and other effects of mining for etherite lead to conflict between environmentalists and the new industrialists.

- Gulf between wealthy industrialists and oppressed workers grows wide.
- Transition catalyst: A great smog caused by new factories causes Eun'sur lead revolt as they charge and destroy massive mines harvesting Etherite. Destroying this mine releases some long hidden underground creature that rampages and destroys a massive nearby metropolis.

In this transition there could be a brief Dieselpunk interlude. This iron age could have many wars sparking technological innovations. This war will be fought with armored tanks and combustion engines but will be won once the power of the sun is unleashed with an atomic bomb.

- Solarpunk / Rise in religion
 - The Church of Gharian scholars discover solar power by using Solite which can be harvested without harmful environmental impacts.
 - After a secular 600 years the faiths are able to bring people together as mass industrialization has destroyed many communities.
 - Eco-conscious societies embrace renewable energy while some industrialists manipulate and conspire against this new tech to hold on to what wealth they still have.
 - Green communes and decentralized governance replace megacorporation.
 - Some cults worship solar power as a deity of it's own.
 - Masses flock to Jericho's ladder during the Week Day a time in the southern sea where the sun doesn't set for weeks.
 - This era should be when space travel goes beyond the moons of Rithmia using solar sails space exploration is possible and all the planets of the solar system are visited by Rithmians
 - Should be full treasure planet solar punk
 - Transition catalyst: "Cult's of darkness" (yes very edgy) conduct a ritual to prolong a solar eclipse. This triggers a global energy crisis, exposing vulnerabilities in this eco-utopia.
 - Two major responses are:
 - Create "off-world solar farm" aka a Dyson belt (Dyson swarm surrounding the belt of the sun like Saturn's rings
 - Make it so energy is not reliant on any outside force and the human body can be the battery of civilization leading to the next era

Towards the end of this era we could have a brief time of atompunk

1900PD - 2150PD

- Information age
 - Cyberpunk /y2k futurism
 - Cybernetic enhancements, data networks, neon-lit megacities
 - Human-technology merger (can use the x-men merging thing as influence)
 - A digital underclass revolts against corporate overlords (classic)
 - Real life tech's like cities being powered by people walking on the sidewalk generating energy should be invented. Also things like people "plugging in" and doing mukbang's but their metabolism is being used to power a building like a generator should be the darker part of this.
 - Travel between planets becomes regular and a part of everyday life as the brief atompunk period combined with this leads to fusion core powered ships that can traverse the space between planets in just a few hours and travel from Rithmia to the furthest planet in just over a day
 - Nicola Tesla like global wifi / energy that can be used as a man made Weave (could be a 10th level Weave Enhancement spell).
 - Arcane Power becomes very prevalent again after this Weave Boost.
 - Transition catalyst: A virus corrupts global networks after biotech firms genetically engineer "perfect" humans, sparking revolution of man vs. perfect man. It's revealed that these "perfect" humans are merely cyborgs with A.I. brains and are entirely machine with a flesh suit on top.

2150PD - 2400PD

- Bio punk/ Bio-Digital Age
 - This is mostly an extension of the previous age of cyberpunk influence and there are many similarities between the two
 - Things like genetic engineering and living machines (A.I.) made of a metal that can "grow" (___) and repair itself become common place.
 - Scientists study this to create a bio - aether - machine DNA hybrid that can self repair leading to erasure of things like 'dying of old age'
 - The Weave Boost allows for bio-aether hybrid creations to be possible (bigger, stronger, better than golems or constructs of the past.
 - People integrate tech into their body with prosthetics, implants and other biotechnologies
 - Space Exploration Via Helms is possible. Discovered and utilized by technofeudal companies to create company town in space
 - Transition catalyst: A rogue bioweapon accidentally resurrects ancient Scourge beings thought erased from existence destabilizing the world.

2400PD - 2900PD

- Space age / Complete Hybrid punk
 - Magic-powered cybernetics, solar-fueled biotech, and steampunk inspired artistry in gadgets / tech.
 - A fragile alliance of mages, engineers, and biohackers govern a patchwork world close to the brink of collapse. Some feel escaping the planet is the only viable option for survival of Rithmians
 - Rithmians make contact through space travel to all other planets (portals could be used for world hopping previously)
 - Mortals make contact with Torm's watchers at the edge of the Solar System
 - This metaphysical barricade is broken after Torm, The Last Demigod is slain.
 - Ends with a new Cataclysm incited by a group of wizards who conducted a mysterious arcane ritual trapping the world in a permanent stasis under a purple moon leading to the "release of Yith'Zizctal"
 - Perhaps an underlying reason is that if the world was not trapped in stasis the full barage of the unspeakable one's scourge would have invaded the Rithmiasphere.

Tiamat's Rise (~200PD)

Tuesday, December 27, 2022 11:12 PM

For centuries to come lesser deities found their way into the daily lives of the citizens of Rithmia. And over the course of a millennia life grew and blossomed into many vast separated civilizations across Rithmia. During this time Tiamat emerged for the first time creating the chromatic dragons and burning parts of the land all across Rithmia. Tiamat's fall to the hells marks the first time mortals ever "defeated" (she was banished) a deity. Tiamat left behind other draconic creations like Abishais and various cults. This also marks two important changes in the entirety of Rithmia. Mortals now felt confidence like never before that it was possible for mortals to challenge the gods. Before this no mortal had ever successfully ascended to godhood but after this some tried and maybe some (Like Torm) succeeded. The strength of the gods began to lessen as a wave of people all across the globe grew more secular.

- Tiamat breached into the material plane and was slain by three great knights who all ascended to be lesser deity's known as The Protectors happened roughly 80 years ago during the last "Synchronicity". Torm absorbed the life force of the faithful in Tantras but spared all children in order to create a sphere and protect against the mighty breath of Tiamat. After learning about this in his study of abjuration magic it inspired Tarntassa to build his defense bell in the city.
 - Platinum Knight Torm justice & defense
 - Crimson Knight (female red Dragonborn) Qandia god of strategy
 - Ethereal Knight Watchman (black panther paladin) Mawara god of portals planar gates

The Four Degenerates (post campaign antics)

Saturday, February 15, 2025 8:45 AM

Kitalsi:

- In lichdom kitalsi makes great discoveries in blending the primal and arcane magics to create new “technology”
 - He begins to grow mushrooms with specific magical effects such as:
 - Twin portal mushrooms: this mushroom grows in one bulky stalk but splits during adolescence to have to head that curl into a large spiral in opposite directions and create a portals reminiscent of the transplant via plants spell but these portals only lead to its mirror so seemingly useless unless you want to travel about 8 feet to your left/right. However with a combined Nature and Sleight of hand check DC 30 the stalk can be split and the two halves each containing their gateway remain stable and can be moved to anywhere around the prime material plane. These mushrooms aren’t strong enough to survive on different plane of existence but can essentially replace teleportation circles on Rithmia.

Troph:

- Founding member of the vanguard and often acts as the face of operations when he leaves the floating isles to do so. This way he essentially gains followers and fame on his quest to achieve godhood. He is deified by many followers and he rules the floating isle and sets it up as a utopia of all kinds of races as whenever he frees slaves he offers to have them move to the floating isles
- Founds many way of mercy monasteries high in mountains or near gateways to the EEP which emphasize the to be merciful to the masses their masters may have to be put down since not ever change of heart is permanent.

Jegim:

- Lives for a prolonged amount of time due to his conquering of the lycanthropy which he was born with which in time gives him a sort of healing factor so to speak.
- Is known as one of the greatest bards in the land
 - Dual wielder of harps
 - Harpinger of Destruction
- Founds various Bardic colleges
 - Tantras (post vanguard takeover) houses the first college of heavy metal as Jegim essentially invents Djent
 - College of Emotions is founded near the plains of limbo in the Midwest of Glaushun
- Would be funny if somehow he drank a planar vortex and gained crazy magic powers of some kind.
- He should have this item

Ooze Armor - 5e

Armor (any medium or heavy armor), legendary (requires attunement)

This semi-solid armor, molded from slimes, is semi-transparent. Despite its defined shape, it still has a gelatinous texture that wiggles and jiggles when worn.

You have a +2 bonus to AC while wearing this armor. While attuned to this armor, any creature that hits you with a melee attack takes 1d4 acid damage. In addition, any nonmagical weapons made of metal or wood that hit you will corrode. After dealing damage, the weapon takes a permanent and cumulative —1 penalty to damage rolls. If its penalty drops to —5, the weapon is destroyed. Nonmagical ammunition made of metal or wood that hits you is destroyed after dealing damage.

Evain:

- After the Kaiju primagaru is defeated and Evain claims his prize of harvesting vast chunks of it (and considering he already died once and lost his air genasi body) he is hell bent on creating the strongest vessel possible for his soul.
- During this time he spends most of his time underground in the floating isle working with Kitalsi or whatever mad man he has recruited to help. The air genasi who work for him are mutated by the pieces of flesh Evain is using and become the moth men of the age of dystopia
- However, unbeknownst to him, this vessel is made up of parts of Yith'Zizctal The Consumer and so when Evain traps his soul inside there is a constant struggle for power within himself. As the pieces of the consumer do not decay he lives for thousands of years but often sequesters himself in ravines or deep in the earth as the body urges him towards the heart of the world but Evain yearns to fly so whenever he is briefly cleansed of madness he flies through the sky often seeking the floating isle him and his cousin and friends founded a nation on.

Age of Dystopia (Time of Reckoning) (2,900PD - Present)

Wednesday, September 6, 2023 10:07 AM

Yith'Zizctal has been imprisoned in the earth for millennia, the apocalyptic deities work to infiltrate the nine hells, and steal the key of Solomon from Asmodeus to unlock the divine seal, sunder the pillars of restraint, and allow The Consumer to rip free from this cage and consume all.

This is where we find ourselves now. A mysterious baby with 8 divine essences contained within its soul. Four strangers who stumbled upon the arcane nexus where "The Child" was born are now tasked with caring for the baby.

Key points of this age

- The oceans begin to dry up and over just the first century of this era deplete by 90%.
- Where ocean was is barren dessert.
- Wherever there are caverns ravines or passages to the underdark should be dank moldy and overgrown with moldy fungus.
- The sun has turned a bright violet color and days are much longer.

Release of Yith'Zizctal

Saturday, March 15, 2025 7:12 PM

The Unspeakable One's forces finally break his first born free of the core of Rithmia. Planet is ripped asunder. In the future after this point there will just be New Rithmia which will be a large space station much like the Death Star but not quite planet shaped it'll be an elongated hourglass type shape with various rings encircling and floating around the center where small contained singularity resides

After the destruction of Rithmia following the release of the consumer the calendar will shift for rithmiasphereians with BR and AR marking years before release and after release. The R is also sometimes known as reckoning or Rithmia (After Rithmia)

Prime pantheon: 8 og deities

- Gharian, The Jolly
- Gaia, The Allmother
- Ados, The Architect
- Xinthris, The Weaver
- Janus, The Judge
- Ziesis, The Reaper
- Asmodeus, The Devil
- Caldor, The Ironlord

Two “families” were the origin point of these 8 (10) deities with Gaia and the god of ends parenting Gharian Janus and to a much less literal sense Xinthris. This is the family of growers/cultivators. The second family is the makers/forces Asmodeus, Caldor, Ados and Asmodeus brother The messenger. Zeisis was the odd one out in the beginning as well and has been ever since. A fly on the wall or perhaps the most wise of them all. Some say they aren’t the same “type” of being as the rest of the deities. Not that they aren’t a “god” but they are just different from the rest

Council of chosen: demigods selected by prime gods (in order of promotion w/ virtue the embody)

- Ki'Una, The Wayfarer
- Lemos, The Enlightened
- Torm, The Devoted
- Qandia, The Cunning
- Mawara, The Watcher
- ?

The unknown entities:

- Lady of Decay (Zuggtmoy)

- The watcher (sometimes referred to as god of secrets)

Apocalyptic Deities: 9 demigods of sin spawned by the unspeakable

Only way to truly kill a god is to gain power over a deity in one of its domains. Ex learn the origins of the god of secrets, sneak attack the god of shadows and assassins. This kills the previous god and the challenger takes their place. Another path to godhood is to pass the tests of the star stone(?).

Deities once walked the planet however they were ignorant to the fact that they were not in fact the apex predators, The Outer gods seem to be as old as anything else and their spawn, the great old ones only seem able to truly satiate themselves and slumber after consuming a deity. This throws whatever domain that deity rules into absolute chaos.

Gharian, The Jolly

Herald	The herald of Gharian is seemingly a young human man whose smile can brighten the darkness of the abyss. Short curly black hair atop a slender tanned body who constantly makes jokes and even fourth wall breaking comments while staying aloof about most of their surrounding. Is the emissary of joy and is able to lite the fire of passion in non evil creatures through their mere presence. Often uses their stomach as a drum beat and even beat boxes when not making some kind of jokes. Is the ultimate hype man and great at ad libs.
Lore	Is the being responsible for the back door deal to give mortals free will, going against the lawful deities Ados, Asmodeus, and his brother Janus. Gaia made first then the suggestion of conciousness and intelligence was suggested by Xinthris in an off handed comment. Gharian taking this literally suggested to Gaia "moving forward with mortal creations give them free will". Gaia responded "But that will make them too close to us, our brothers see these as tools. Why let them do what they want?" "Think of a creation that can ascend to our level, or higher. Isn't the possibility of an ally more fun than a bland tool? I urge you to listen to me. Make them in our image." "Asmodeus, Caldor, Ados see these as workers, even my brother Janus sees them as incomplete, but they are vital to help us when the malevolent light returns" "Make them in our image Mother"
Creations	Created the yazata out of light and radiant energy Originally created true giants but after being injured in the fight with the consumer was never strong enough to grant one rebirth so that's why all giants after wards don't match up to true giants

Herald	As The Allmother she had two great heralds who originally held dominion over the inner elements as well as all beasts. A great multicolored feathered serpent (like q'uq'umatx kukulkan quezoquatl) named Sylphratl larger than an ancient wyrm held dominion over the sky's and sea (air and water) and aquatic and avian species. A massive stag (half stag half indrik), ruler of all land animals named Zolnixus. Their hooves could create earth where there was none and their antlers could channel lighting and fire. Both Heralds of Beasts were grand multicolored creatures showing all aspects of the rainbow through their coat or scales yet after the split of The Allmothers psyche both heralds were "blanched" and they have not seen on the material plane in millennia. Religious scholars theorize they require much of the injured Gaia's energy to summon forth and can only be done a limited number of times. However before these two heralds came into being Gaia had one daughter from whom all animal life can trace some sort of root back. This creature is named Luca (last universal common ancestor). Nobody knows exactly what it looked like since all of it's descendants vary so greatly. It was the first animal Gaia molded after purging the ancient yith from the surface of Rithmia
Lore	The Allmother was the original deity in charge of the elements but after she was splintered in the fight against Yith'Zizctal her power wavered over time opening the door for a need to grant dominion over the elements to other beings resulting in the elemental war. She is responsible for creating all flora and fauna on Rithmia. Animals were the original mortal creation before the fight with The Consumer. After that the creation of mortals transformed and free will was bestowed upon all thereafter as Xinthris and Gharian pleaded to Gaia to make them in their own divine image. From this point on mortal beings became an experiment to see who could stand side by side with the deities to protect their creations. In her true form The Allmother has a serpentine body with scales like that of tree bark. Her underbelly is pure starlight and positive energy. As her true form slithers flora is permanently left behind as plants and foliage grow from the ground at a rapid pace. Her eyes are pure green orbs with a single white dot in each. She has dull fangs and a flower grows from the end of her tail. She often "sprouts" limbs as needed and they grow from her snake body like massive redwood trees. She is the eldest of all the prime deities. Is said to have been more wrathful in youth, traversing the known universe swallowing entire crystal sphere in a single gulp. Gaia in her all mother form is the eldest of all the deities. The Reaper often claims that he can't smell death on her. Gaia was originally meant to hold all of Rithmia as her domain. The original Rithmia before the cataclysm and all of her wonderful blissful creations are now known as fey. This is why fey creatures are both primitive humanoids and spirits of nature because they literally are as that's what Gaia made them to be when she had control over the elements. After the battle of containing The Consumer Gaia had to split herself into two aspects, Gaia The Earth, and The Decomposer (sometimes called The Undergrowth). Gaia dwells on the surface The Decomposer in the underdark. "Do you believe the one who blooms the flowers and sprouts the trees can't also decay the earth and consume its fruits?" If The Earth and The Decomposer ever reform they will return to their original state "The All-Mother"

Creations	Created all fey creatures, the feywild (primal plane), and the 12 primordial beasts. Indirectly 'ruled' the primordials before the other deities helped seal them away in the elemental chaos. Ancient Primordial scriptures (huge cave paintings and carvings in the earth) mention a grand serpent that circled the globe. This is a reference to Gaia's true form. Believed to have laid the first dragon eggs but it is unconfirmed.

Intricate clockwork like the inside of a watch make up the construct like body of the Herald known as ____ is a living breathing being no matter how mechanical and artificial it looks. ____ can take various forms depending on its environment and it takes the form of a white pufferfish in water and a unique type of falcon when flight is necessary. In the form of a ram it can wind up its legs and leaps miles at a time and this ability is often used to spring into the air before shifting to flight form.
Lore	Created the anatomical blueprint for humanoid creatures. The most isolationist of all the deities Post-Containment. Works continuously to bolster the armies of heaven for the inevitable. Even though the architect is a technical pragmatic creature on the surface there is a deep intense passion for those thing they deem worthy of it. While cool and logical about things outside its immediate sphere of influence they truly love a select number of things inside their sphere of passions. This can include certain animals, followers or creations of their own. Followers of The Architect believe that creating something that would lie inside the heart the Ados is the highest achievement possible akin to enlightenment. They are deemed "Masterworks" and can be physical objects, spells, philosophic ideas, movements, organizations, etc. this is the true path to enlightenment for the most devoted followers of the architect. Boasting about a masterwork is the easiest way for The Architect to disregard it. One must create their masterwork for a purpose other than fame, material gain it must be for a truly good purpose.
Creations	The Inevitables (see pathfinder), which are used as active forces fighting against the fiends of Abbadon and The Abyss

	The Archons
Related Artifacts	Tutci

Ados promoted Torm, The Devoted to godhood after placing two of Tiamat's head in a chokehold and dragging the evil dragon queen to her death. Torm and his draconic companion reside in the realm of Heaven and lead the armies of law against those of chaos in the upper and neutral planes.

Uses the Lojban language for creations.

Worshippers	Wizards, sorcerers, oracles, scholars, and seekers of mystical knowledge.
Sacred Animal	A light purple and blue spider with Peacock like features (Maratus volans)

A beautiful cloak with an ornate neck piece opens upwards showing a gender neutral face that has a strong jaw and tucked in cheeks and high cheekbones. They have a mix of blue and purple feathers for hair and they don't have feet they seem to constantly float about two feet off the ground.
Lore	Wove the weave around Rithmia allowing "control access" to the arcane energy flowing into the world from other planes. Before the weaver earned her title in an unknown past somewhere in the known universe all magic was primal magic and only druids had access to arcane ability. Then the weaver wove the web of arcane energy that deities, and all inner and outer planes pump magical essence in to allowing arcane and divine magic to be accessible to mortal creatures. One man thought he could do better than this weaver and attempted to usurp the weaver using the power found on a secret scroll. This man had one great rival who was able to stop him before he was able to unravel the weave. This came at the cost of allowing elemental chaos to flood into the prime material plane leading to primordials being freed from containment. The original fool and his name are lost to the ages. However, his rival is known as Lemos, The Enlightened.
Creations	Elohim (see pathfinder)
Mortal servants	Stitchers: powerful mages who rework the weave itself in areas where magical disasters have caused dead zones in the weave or other magical mishaps that affect magic due to a break in the weave. These guys often act like magical IT guys who have to travel grand distances for a short stitching ritual or it's something serious and they must gather a group of stitchers for a grand weave rewrite ritual. An Jewel eyes: these are arcane historians who study the present they observe and record what will one day become historical events using divination magic. The most devout craft arcane eyes out of pearls and other gems that constantly record everything they see and save it an special pool of liquid etherite that when another person fully submerges their head in they may observe these recorded events Scattered Spider: basically a hacker group on the extreme end of chaotic neutral. They use magic to disrupt cities or even the weave itself like arcane hackers in order to sew chaos. Sometimes they do good sometimes they cause harm to average people they don't care they are just pushing the limits.

Janus, The Judge

Monday, December 26, 2022 11:37 PM

Alignment	LN
Domains	Grave, Fate, Death
Divine Realm:	The Veiled Halls, Purgatory
Allies	Ziesis
Enemies	Xinthris, Caldor, Gharian
Relationships	Brother Gharian and son of Gaia
Temples	Graveyards, mausoleums, and temples of repose serve as sacred grounds where Janus is honored.
Worshippers	Clerics, morticians, judges, seekers of spiritual guidance, and those who ponder the mysteries of death.
Sacred Animal	Black dogs
Sacred Colors (clergy colors)	Steel and Slate grey
Edicts	Uphold justice, honor the departed, guide souls to their rightful place, accept the inevitability of fate.
Anathema	Distorting fate, perverting the natural cycle of life and death, denying justice, causing unnecessary suffering.
Symbols	Scales of justice, an hourglass, a key to the afterlife.
Herald	The herald of Janus is a large black dog that in bright light is partially transparent and ghostlike. The only non-black features of this creature are the whites of its eyes and teeth. Around its neck is a heavy iron chain with each individual link holding a few keys of various sizes and materials. Black dogs in myth are seen as symbolizing contradictions. They are symbols of guardianship and protection, yet also can be signs of bad omens. Spike like his master is LN. They simply are what should be. Some people who see this creature experience a bad omen because that is their fate. Others feel protected by them because it is not their fate to meet their end. Spike is a bitter enemy of random slaughter, and of undeath. This black dogs favorite chew toys are Lich bones. Spike thinks of Janus as his father, therefore Uncle Gharian is one of his best friends. Gharian, when possible, plays fetch with Spike using bones of the greatest evils to have ever lived.
Lore	The god of ends, and destiny. Despises necromancy which in his eyes is fate correctional magic. Rules over the Seven Pools of Purgatory where 'incomplete' souls can essentially marinate in a pool of a pure essence before being sent to their rightful path of reincarnation.
Mortal servants	Most followers of the judge work in justice of some kind either as clerics whose professions may include arbiters judges or lawyers. Other work in law enforcement as paladins. Either way these wear baggy grey robes as to not signify any wealth and standing that may alter the judgment of others merely by viewing them once. Some darker members (parts of the grave domain) of The Judges clergy team up with the church of The Reaper and dawn the title Soul Shepherd carrying the symbol of a black sheep dog close to heart. These people exercise their power in sending souls they believe are "due to be reforged" to the afterlife. Some can even call of phantom hounds at will and are some of the few mortals who have met a grim reaper and lived because they are essentially coworkers

Alignment	CE
Domains	Death, darkness, pain, necromancy, sacrifice
Divine Realm	Shadowfell specifically the Hallowed Abyss
Allies	None shunned by other gods
Enemies	Janus
Relationships	Ziesis, The Reaper, serves as the emissary who brings souls to Janus for judgment, though their motives and methods are often shrouded in darkness and mystery.
Temples:	Crypts, forbidden catacombs, and hidden altars dedicated to Ziesis are concealed in the darkest corners of the world.

Symbols:	Scythe cloaked in shadows, an ethereal skull, a black shroud.
Holy text:	Scenes of death, basically a 1000 ways to die graphic novel.
Herald:	Ziesis has no true herald as they instead have a myriad of psychopomps (aka Grim reapers) who collect souls of the recently deceased and guide them to his ship on the river of souls.
Lore:	Ironically the god of death is one role that has changed hands many times as it is in fact a curse. It takes millennia but the power of death withers all. No god of death thinks they are above dying so towards the ends they find someone to replace them. A mortal known as "Deaths chosen" receive a curse (much like zerefs) that instantly destroys and decays all life in an area around it a burden they carry the remainder of their mortal life in order to understand the power of death. Only undead can survive in the aura. The current "deaths chosen" is a young female woman who lost both parents early in life and lost their younger brother at the age of 17 (it was her fault). She now wanders alone.
Avatars/servants /champions:	has multiple servants who all ferry souls in different circumstances. In large scale wars those breathing their final breaths glimpse upon a Tallyman which is a gargantuan armored shape that eclipses the sun, a behemoth comprised of broken arms and shattered walls. War personified. Terror incarnate. Pain and desolation made manifest. It resembles a automata or construct like the giant in black ops zombies. These unfortunate dyers also hear the faint robotic voice constantly counting the death count and exclaiming how each one dies. (Ex. 9 stab wound to heart, 10 shot in the head, 11 shot in the heart, etc.) See https://scp-wiki.wikidot.com/three-short-scenes-about-death for reference Some members of the reapers clergy dawn the title Soul Shepherd carrying the symbol of a black sheep dog close to heart. These people exercise their power in sending souls they believe are “due to be reforged” to the afterlife. Some can even call of phantom hounds at will and are some of the few mortals who have met a grim reaper and lived because they are essentially coworkers.

Psychopomps (who they collect):

Tallyman (Lots of death)

Yamaraj (Very important dead person)

Legendary items / artifacts: Spinesword we'll mostly the sheath is a spine but also the handle is the remaining section of the spine

Lore	It's said that Asmodeus appears to mortals as the most beautiful creature they could imagine. He never knows exactly what that will be like in their eyes but he knows it gives him an advantage. However if you ever meet him on a different plane his true form is a very tall slender man in a suit black suit white shirt red tie. Instead of a pitchfork seen in some iconography he wields a short cane that ends in a double prong resembling a tuning fork. This fork can be struck to control (paralyze) non deities in his vicinity.
Creations	All devils. Devils are the creations of Asmodeus as he was wholly opposed to giving mortals free will. Therefore he created beings who could be bound by contracts and the strict meritocracy of Hell meant his realm would have the best chance of surviving a second round against the invasion of the scourge.
Mortal servants	Fiendish contractors (GHMG) Cursed couriers: Fiendish mail carriers who deliver contracts payments or any other deliverables to the rightful owner. Most often they find the successor of a deceased person who has incurred any devilish debt the recently deceased did not pay out before dying. The letters / contracts they deliver are often marked with blood or scream or both and leave an awful black residue on your hands that is not easy to wash off.

Symbols	A flaming axe, a towering fortress, an anvil and Warhammer. The axe, anvil, and Warhammer often have chips and shard missing making them look worn out.
Herald	For unknown reasons, maybe due to a nefarious deal, the current Herald of Caldor is the Horseman of War; one of the Horseman of Apocalypse from Abaddon. Their original herald was Therrakul an obsidian rhinoceros who has gone mad for some reason.
Lore	Is the god who hardened the crust to make the first raw ores. Promoted his chosen the red knight Qandia to lesser deity status after slaying/banishing Tiamat.
Magic	Caldor is often associated with the school of abjuration since the element that forms the back bone of many abjurative rituals is iron. And there is a decent bit of iron in blood. This means blood binding is a sacred art of his worshippers and the more blood used the casters or otherwise the stronger the bond created

 - Ados, and Xinthris had been in secret working on creating an artifact that could elevate a mortal to godhood. The issue is part of an existing gods divine heart was necessary for its creation. In her weakened form Gaia's Earth aspect allowed hers to be used with one condition. The first recipient must nurture her and her true form back to health. Knowing that without assistance it could take millions of years to rebuild herself. With help it may only take 100,000 years. So technically Gaia, The Earth Promoted Lemos to godhood.

That is why Torm is connected with the wanderers that guard the planet's crystal sphere. That is why the temple of torma's coming is building the pact breaker as they are about to start an inquisition looking for "anybody making deals with evil entities" Leader of the "trio of protectors" Acts similar to archangel Michael is the warrior of heaven, leader of army against undead and fiends of the lower planes. Torm's Wanderers guard the crystal sphere from malevolent breaches. Evil aligned entities may face a horde of undead with the sole purpose of defending the solar system. Torm's wanderers are a group of lost souls who in the last moments of their life attempted to redeem themselves for selfish purposes hoping their soul would not be judged to harshly. These liars did not truly rebuke their actions on life they simply attempted to deceive the universe itself and as such are not a part or a semi ethereal border separating the physical from the metaphysical. These wanders bar extraterrestrial entry into the Rithmia sphere. A secondary goal of these wanderers is to use the power of these lost souls to expand the metaphysical barrier surrounding the Rithmiasphere. The Unspeakable

Alignment	CE
Domains	Trickery, Ambition, Chaos
Divine Realm	Far realm, Southern tip of the known universe
Allies	Yith'Zictal, Outer gods, great old one
Enemies	Mortal life, The prime pantheon
Relationships	Father of madness. Spawn Yith'Zictal (and in turn the scourge)
Temples	Places of opulence that hold dark secrets.
Worshippers	Cultists, aristocrats, those with influence, any who wish to indulge in their deepest desires
Sacred Animal	Spiders
Sacred Colors (clergy colors)	Violet, bright purple of all shades
Edicts	Sow discord, advance your own goals, indulge in your greatest desires, selfishly misuse authority
Anathema	Be peaceful, make amends
Symbols	Purple cloak, either depicted with white stars in place of a face or a pristine palid mask under the hood.
Holy texts	Insania Aenigmatica (Enigmatic Madness tomb of occult lore discussing the Far realm and the edges of the universe. Has basic descriptions for 6 "Outer Gods" one of which is The Unspeakable)
Lore	The unspeakable is a singular entity on a higher dimension. To describe their "body would be like describing a solar system as they have tendrils lashing out from their star-like main body that form planets at the end" When a soul is absorbed and pulled from the body to be absorbed into the unspeakable they experience something similar as when Dante enters the emperium in the divine comedy (white rose of where each petal is an infinite number of blessed souls) A distant malevolent star had found Rithmia and locked in on this new planet of uncorrupted mortals. This star harbors an elder evil – a being as old as the stars themselves. This being is so otherworldly that it is able to read the emotions of the ants (mortals) crawling on this planet. It is unknown whether it has a goal, is all seeing, acting purely on instinct or overly calculated. The elder evil of many names such as the violet flame, the unspeakable, the original sin and the eldest is a star of such ill intent that its mere thoughts and feelings spawn evil deities. The first group is what would later be referred to as The Apocalyptic Deities. At the heart of the unspeakables ideals is indulgence in sin and nihilism. They fully indulge in these sins because they believe their is no point in being any other way. Followers will commit whatever unsightly sin they please because they feel there is no true meaning to be good or to anything at all. Why not have a little fun while painting the world mad. Great old one trapped in the core of the earth is sometimes referred to as "the original sin" but the connection between the two is not clear. The key of stars is just one shard of a massive black crystal obelisk that if reformed and the correct ritual performed can open a gate wide enough for one of the unspeakables planet tendrils to enter the rithmiasphere solar system In a time before ages, The Unspeakable One awoke. Still groggy this beings light began to spread across all realms of reality. In spite of its efforts the light stopped in a large region of the material plane. The prime deities were holding back the purple light from their new creation, the Rithmiasphere. Agitated by this an idea sprang from The Unspeakable and became his first spawn. The idea was a creature that eradicate anything his light and thus Yith'Zictal, The Consumer was born. The next idea The Unspeakable One had was a creature that could forcibly "Spread the purple light" and thus the scourge were born. The idea is that once assimilated by a scourge crawler you join the hivemind and are a part of the purple light (which is basically a network not getting into the nerd shit now).
Avatars	The purple pharaoh this is the purple robed humanoid figure that wears a stark white mask and has galaxies for eyes under the mask. Another avatar is referred to as "the boy" it is a short malnourished human boy probably around 12 years old. Long stringy oily white hair sticks to the boys shoulders, bright violet eyes, a dirty robes and tattered sandals. The boy is covered in blood. This is the first bot sacrificed in his name on Rithmia.
Creations	Void spawn, The scourge, unclear what his connection is to other far realm creatures like mind flayers and aboleths who seem to bear his colors.

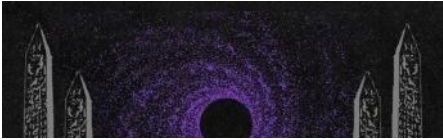

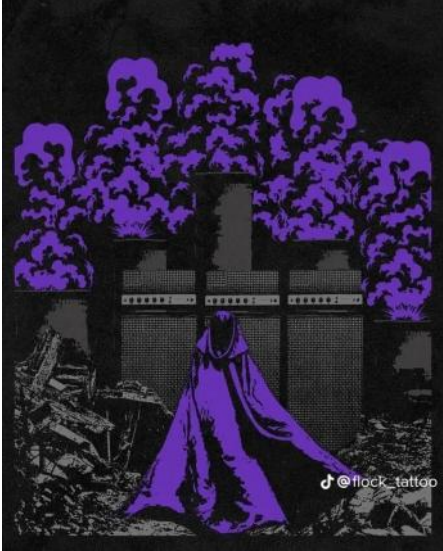

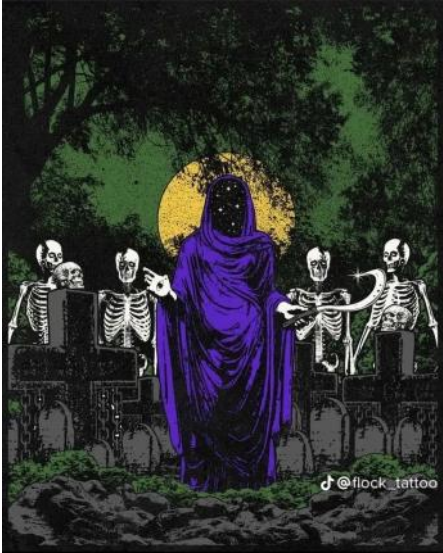

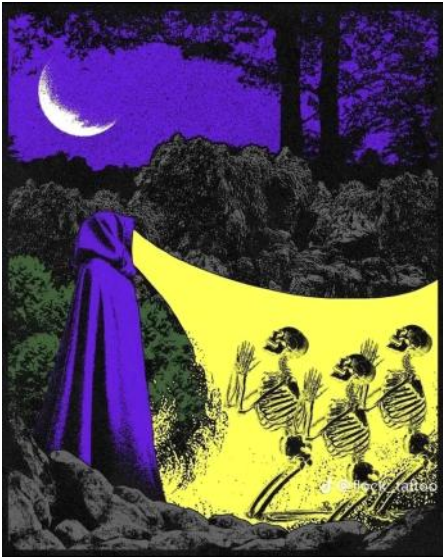

Is a combination of nyarlepotep and yog-sothoth as well as hints of https://villains.fandom.com/wiki/Scarlet_King

This is just one "outer god" that has pierced into the tiny perception of Rithmias space of the universe. In truth there are at least 6 other outer gods

Since he seems to want to consume entire regions once Rithmians start using telescopes they should find entire regions of space with a violet filter over them

The origin of the unspeakable should be near a Bootes void like area of space

Strands of hair that are actually aberrant creatures bind to the skull of victims and grant the victim a cosmic eye. In moments of intense emotion their eyes look like galaxies and they actually see what the unspeakable sees which is vast cosmic areas of space. Inspired by the amagami from junji itos sensor book. The victims often witness planets full of life being destroyed and vast amounts of universal information pouring into their brains

Yith'Zizctal, The Consumer

Wednesday, December 28, 2022 1:24 PM

Alignment	CE
Domains	Void, Darkness
Divine Realm	The Far Realm (Now Hunger's Void)
Allies	The Unspeakable (Father)
Enemies	All Life
Relationships	First born of The Unspeakable. Eldest Scourge
Temples	Dark crypts, underground tombs, ruins of destroyed civilizations
Worshippers	Cultists, psychopaths
Sacred Animal	Aboleth? Squid?
Sacred Colors (clergy colors)	Dark purple
Edicts	Consume all in your path
Anathema	Leave survivors
Symbols	Purple swirl inside an hexagon
Lore	Yith'Zizctal, the eldest, the aberrant overlord, is said to be The Unspeakable one's oldest child and the one who brought the scourge to the world to rule it tens of thousands of years ago. It is trapped slumbering in the core of the planet, occasionally sending offspring (tarrasque, other kaiju, Godzilla) to the surface splintering through the ground causing global earthquakes and volcanic eruptions and tsunamis as they breach the surface. This is always preceded by a full year where Yith'Zizctal must "consume" before it can reproduce. It consumes by eating arcane energy forcibly pulling energy from the weave and spellcasters into itself to generate the new life form. This reduces the number of spell slots for a casters highest level. This means it is impossible to cast 9th level spells during this year. This consumption does not affect warlocks whose pact lie with Yith'Zizctal or other outer gods. Some cults have obviously formed in its name. Also some powerful orders believe the planet should try to summon this beast from the core to slay it and stop these offspring that come every millennium. Others believe it would cause a complete wipe of all life rendering it fruitless. Yith'Zizctal has the unique ability to consume a being and wipe all trace of it from existence. Their name may not be said and mention of them is wiped from memory of any mortal being and even books that make reference to them are erased. This is because all mentions of them are transported to the demiplane that occupies the interior of their stomach called Hunger's Void. Part of the two deities from the Rithmiasphere are in Hunger's Void, specifically two divine sparks reside here meaning if someone may make it here retrieve them and find a way to escape they would escape a new deity. The body's / husks of these deities are floating in the astral sea and are the closest satellites to the Rithmia sphere Since all evidence of them has been wiped it is unclear what these deities were but the most likely theory is one was the messenger god, The Diplomat who was the opposite of Asmodeus coin (maybe his brother look up pathfinder lore). The other was the parallel to Gharian and was the god of darkness and cold/winter known The Frigid, this is why dark places of shadow seem to be unregulated by divine intervention and communication between gods and mortals has been unavailable and why more pagans live on Salphas the coldest continent than any other continent. With The Messenger gone Ados was forced to transport the final two pillars themself When this being eventually breaks free the gods hope to have the other 7 planets fully equipped with powerful beings ready to slaughter the beast in an instant. This is why they seem eager to pull beings to godhood who can help in the cosmic war being waged. Once The Consumer is slain once and for all they can leave the material plane to their creations as their being ascends once again and the chess becomes 6th dimensional instead of 5th. Yith'Zizctal is a primordial word. It means Alien (Yith) Spiraling Death (Zizctal)
Creations	The scourge, void corrupted creatures

The Apocalyptic Deities

Tuesday, December 27, 2022 11:35 PM

These deities are more akin to demigods. Created from the empowering of sin by The Unspeakable, bolstered by mortal emotions. OG Sins in parenthesis. Or new school ones from Chains of Asmodeus could be used instead

The Doombringer, Lord of Pride: Tall broad and bald grey skinned masculine figure with pointed ears and pitch black horns. Thick black leather wrist bands that extend to the elbow

The Destroyer, Lord of Murder (Wrath): Massive 15ft tall red skinned four armed brute with a different weapon in each hand. Little to no armor and rippling muscles spiked black hair pointing straight up.

The Outcast, Lord of Anger (Envy): (This one has been seen before) Heavy tattered yellow/green cloak covers and alien physiology of a mass of tentacles branching off a viscous rib cage. Piercing red eyes appear behind a hall of tentacles at the head and they hold a staff hunched over (has a hunchback too)

The Avarice, Lord of Greed: Thin feminine covered in a simple red cloak but is absolutely covered in accessories like rings and wrist bands. They have tons of piercings on their ears, eyebrows, nose, lips. Two straight ivory horns are stacked with jewelry. Black lips, black eyes, gold fingertips.

The Hedon, Lord of Deceit (Lust): Epitome of tall dark and handsome. Slim and muscular nonbinary. Sharp jawline, round eyes, wearing skin tight mesh shirt, and a black leather kilt.

The Deadheart, Lord of Betrayal (Sloth): Fully disinterested female figure. Pitch black skin, lazy purple eyes, body types is hard to make out as it seems to grab and pull the shadows around them like covering themselves in a blanket to snuggle in and avoid all. Always laying down.

The Hunger, Lord of Jealousy (Gluttony): Tall wide rotund creature with purple skin bubbling up and popping to release spores. From the nose to the belly button is a vertical slit making a mouth with dozens of teeth wiggling on their own. Open mouths appear on both palms as well. Covered in parasites as they consume any and all and contract tons of diseases because of it.

Lord of Oppression

Seven Heavenly Virtues (aka gods plan)

Wednesday, August 30, 2023 8:39 AM

To combat the seven apocalyptic deities are all a result of the churning of negative energy mixing with the light of The Unspeakable. They were born out of The Unspeakable's pure malevolence and are the pinnacle of power in terms of their respective sins.

The Rithmian Systems deities have a plan to counteract these gods. Promote heroes who exonerate the exact opposite of these sins. The holy virtues.

charity, generosity, humility, kindness, love, temperance, and zeal

https://pathfinderwiki.com/wiki/Seven_virtues_of_rule

1. Love -> Sangwena
2. Temperance -> Mawara
3. Charity -> Torm
4. Diligence -> Qandia
5. Kindness -> Ki' Una
6. Patience -> Lemos
7. Humility -> (I want a martyr like deity similar to Illmater who is worshipped by peasants and those being tortured in the hopes they may endure until salvation however to complete the cycle this creature should be NE) maybe they use the horror of what the four horsemen of Abaddon represent to show that they can be overcome)

However, though we don't know how we know Yith'Zizctal is direct offspring of The Unspeakable and therefore stronger than any sin/virtue. This has led the original 8 deities to try a different approach. They will birth a single child with 8 shards of divinity who will be raised amongst mortals learn lessons for each

The Divine Contract

Friday, November 10, 2023 11:54 AM

Part of the infernal contract forged during the battle with the consumer was that the gods may never truly manifest themselves on the material plane as that is what the consumer truly hungers for. It does not care for eating mortals as that would be like us surviving on granules of seasoning where the gods are a rich meals. Heralds are allowed yet avatars are a grey area some may deem necessary to step in but they may incur wrath from their siblings.

The Truth

Friday, November 10, 2023 11:57 AM

Deities as we know them are beings of higher dimensions who have complete control over a certain aspect of life. Like a type 1 civilization harnesses a star they have bound an idea to their will. If we want to get specific they are each a type 3 individual (roughly 6th dimensional). That begs the question where did they come from. The universe can be viewed as panentheistic since all, even divinity, exist throughout the universe and also outside of it in these outer planes. It is closer to pantheism in truth where the true god the one that created all and allowed others to ascend was the universe itself. This one above all is tireless and continues to expand from its inception as its light spreads. Maybe the purple unspeakable is just the result of the visible light of that end of the color spectrum literally being apart of the divine therefore it may not truly be "evil" it just is. It is natural energy and that is just its nature. It may not even be the only outer gods maybe each color of the visible light spectrum is a sentient cosmic being that acts as the natural energy of a certain force/emotion.

Thethenatic silence: when a god does all mortals forget everything about it and it's named is wiped from the universe

Oblivati Mori: Gods are bound by Oblivati Mori to not speak of or evangelize a dead god in any way. Breaking this could cause any number of gods to appear instantly

Lady of Decay

Friday, June 28, 2024 5:09 AM

Referred to by many names, always associated with fungus, and decomposition.

Cult known as the Order of Decomposition is dedicated to the natural cycle of death and rebirth and that in the moments closest to death is when you are closest to enlightenment.

Followers sometimes claim they are those who live in death.

While overall the followers are neutral there are sadistic sides that kill in order to study decay but they try to be righteous by saying the victims deserved it or it was a mercy kill or some other justification.

Most of her followers come from or are related to the underdark as this seems to be the only place she can manifest and avatar. Those in the circle of spores are who she seems most favorable towards. Many Druids claim to have been given messages by her in order to prevent unnecessary destruction especially of nature.

The Watcher

Friday, June 28, 2024 5:17 AM

This is a mysterious entity that only seems to be seen by those witnessing a cataclysmic event or some other major historical moment or people who have died and been resurrected sometimes claim they spot this creature in their last moments, simply watching and observing.

Nobody has interacted with this entity so some claim it is a god, some claim it to be an angel or demon, followers of The Reaper believe it is a unique psychopomp.

Appearance: A tall slender humanoid figure. Body vaguely feminine but with no head. Atop their neck is a single massive eyeball with a rainbow colored iris on the front and back.

“I am cursed to observe and to watch and never interfere by a being of pure entropy who knows for a fact that no matter how long mortals cling to civilization everything will eventually collapse into chaos”

Outer gods

Thursday, April 24, 2025 8:58 PM

Outer gods are space-time symbyotes that are made of defects in reality they are mega structures the size of galaxies that

There are at least 7 of them that are unique entities but they are not individuals. They are the collective whole of species type 4 civilizations that have existed since the time the universe was cool enough to form atoms. Heavily influenced by the xeelee

Might be interesting to create a version of the photino birds from the xeelee sequence as well

Religious Rivalries

Friday, May 9, 2025 3:11 PM

- Gaia vs Caldor
 - o It should be heavily noted in themes and myth that Gaia created the planet Rithmia (literally) but once the convergence of the gods arrived on Rithmia Caldor forcibly implanted the seeds of war by putting metals of war below the soil since Caldor is responsible for placing things like iron, adamantium within Rithmia.
 - o Themes of forcible impregnation and a very masculinity vs femineity type thematic battles.
- Janus vs Gharian
 - o These supposed brother go about things in two wildly different ways.
- Torm vs Qandia vs Mawara
 - o Purpose and benefits (if any) of war. 3 differing reasons for war and conquest.
- Xinthris vs Asmodeus
 - o Of the chaos to order spectrum these two are the furthest two their two respective sides as any two deities. Asmodeus is genuinely sickened that their cunning is nearly identical yet Xinthris seems to continually spin webs of randomness. He says the weave could be immutable and have tightly bound laws but Xinthris specifically made the web to be malleable.
- Ados vs Ziesis
 - o While Ziesis takes life he has the upmost respect for life but The Reaper knows the value of life. Whereas Ados was fundamental to creating the basic physiological blueprint for mortal Rithmians yet now they seemingly are only focused on crafting lifeless machine of law and order for good. They are creating an army of heaven to combat the Outer Gods who have turned their gaze towards the Rithmiasphere.

Orcish Doubles Boxing.

Each team consists of two players, a Fist and a Face.

Teams are positioned into two separate 15' diameter circular rings, usually just a raised platform. Each ring has a Fist and a Face from opposing teams positioned at opposite edges. At the start of a match, each Fist tries to beat the other team's Face unconscious.

A Face can't hit back, but can block, dodge or otherwise try to avoid injury. Grappling is not technically allowed, but if done for a short period (one combat round or so), it is typically overlooked.

The match continues until one of the Faces falls to the ground and stays there for a count of 10 seconds, or if either a Fist or Face steps foot outside of the ring.

Age of Myth Bredoa Campaign

Tuesday, February 4, 2025 10:02 AM

Start in the dragon empire as it collapses into the eternal war it later becomes moves in to the titan jungle later (I'd rather do the other campaign with the dragon empire being a looming threat/side quest. Maybe some of the party are agents for one side that is hoping to use etherite to bolster their dragon empire faction and that's where rivals come in to play)

OR

This could be the discovery of etherite campaign and the dungeon diving quest set out by Godwin's one shot axolotl that takes place like ~40-60 years after the last campaign

I want to do a whole campaign about discovering this where the party has Godwin's level 20 artificer as a group patron roughly 40/50 years after the end of the 4 degens campaign. That axolotl artificer, Shaebyn will have encountered some small bits and realized the magnification powers it hold and the possibilities that can be utilized through its extreme heat conversions capabilities. She will also have made the discovery that she is not the first Rithmian to try to harness this power as she believes the ancient snake empire of Najara used this element in a variety of ways thousands of years ago when that empire spanned the globe following their triumph at the end of the age of division. So she will send the party out on tomb raiding missions to hunt through the ancient ziggurats the dot the landscape of the forgotten coast of Bredoa. However, rivals and enemies will pop up to thwart the party on their journey but that won't be all. The ancient Najara empire will be revealed to be more advanced than previously thought. Etherite seemed to work as the mundane power source for every day utility but their vast arcane knowledge and a glimpse beyond the Rithmia sphere drove them to widespread panic. And an ancient enemy (who they prophesied to return but has now been wished away) drove them to flee the planet and develop world hopping capabilities. There should be hints that a Najara civilization still exists on a neighboring planet but the translation of Etherite to Aetherite should leave gaps in how this different element allowed for such vast technological leaps over the Etherite power that is just barely being rediscovered

Punk Genres

The punk genres take a technology of a given time period and stretch it to the extreme fantastical limits. Inherently the punk suffix mean themes of rebellion social alienation and sticking it to big government/corporations should be present for most common folk or at least the heros of our stories.

I want any of these subgenres to be viable in the world of Rithmia at some point.

River of souls festival

Sunday, March 9, 2025 10:16 PM

In a city on or near a river the church of Zeisis or Janus hold a special festival with very dia de los muertos style events during the day however at sunset the acolytes pass around glowing orbs and a special tool to inscribe the name of a recently deceased person. These orbs are placed inside lanterns and set a float down the river. This is said to grant the recently departed a safe journey down the river of souls. Some claim that if the soul has already found its resting place the lantern will shift colors to represent their place in the afterlife.

Interesting governments / societies

Sunday, June 22, 2025

10:00 AM

In any era it would be interesting to implement these as the dominant government that isn't the usual capitalist system

- Anarchism (no centralized powers)
 - Specifically anarcho-syndicalism which is a system in which syndicates (unions / groups of organized laborers groups by industry / category of work) hold power. So the "branches" of governments are the labor unions themselves.
 - This could work on a truly massive scale since peoples are usually grouped geographically around which resources are strong in certain areas.
 - Consider a city founded in a large forest almost entirely ran by a lumber union. Life would be centered around cultivating for the long term so their would be jobs for not only cutting trees but technology for better efficiency and ecological roles like planting trees and food for the town, plus freight positions for exporting lumber and also in return importing resources not native to the forest that are still necessary from nearby mining or agricultural towns

Material Plane (Crystal sphere)

Moons of Rithmia

Rithmia has three moons: Jericho and Aylin (which has rings) are close enough to be dominant over the sky at almost all times of day while the third moon Io shines bright at night.

Jericho

This moon once didn't orbit Rithmia. It once lied in the center of the planet as it's core but had to be moved to make room for the great old one Yith'Zizctal, the eldest, the aberrant overlord, is said to be The Unspeakable one's oldest child and the one who brought aboleths to the world to rule it tens of thousands of years ago. It is trapped slumbering in the core of the planet, occasionally sending offspring (tarrasque, other kaiju, Godzilla) to the surface splintering through the ground causing global earthquakes and volcanic eruptions and tsunamis as they breach the surface. This is always preceded by a full year where Yith'Zizctal must "consume" before it can reproduce. It consumes by eating arcane energy forcibly pulling energy from the weave and spellcasters into itself to generate the new life form. This reduces the number of spell slots for a casters highest level. This means it is impossible to cast 9th level spells during this year. This consumption does not affect warlocks whose pact lie with Yith'Zizctal or other outer gods. Some cults have obviously formed in the name. Also some powerful orders believe the planet should try to summon this beast from the core to slay it and stop these offspring that come every millennium. Others believe it would cause a complete wipe of all life rendering it fruitless.

Aylin (ringed) (Dragon hollow moon)

Rithmia's largest moon is always visible in the sky but is illuminated a beautiful pale blue color at night the rings give off shades of iridescent yellow and orange. Basically in geosynchronous orbit. Past this crust is a vast kong vs godzilla like hollow earth full of dragons of all kinds. Pocket dimensions where draconic deities live have permanent portals here, this includes Bahamet and Sardior, the ruby dragon. Major cities: Ruby palace, (https://forgottenrealms.fandom.com/wiki/Ruby_Palace), and Bahamut's palace (https://forgottenrealms.fandom.com/wiki/Bahamut%27s_Palace) where the seven golden wyrms meet. This lunar body was always hollow and home to the burrowing lunar dragons. Sardior was first to create the ruby palace as an off world domain after the Elemental War. This drew dragons to it as they grew in power and is a kind of oasis to dragons of any gem and metallic variety as well as non-evil chromatic and special dragon.

Io

Io is the furthest moon and is actually a kind of satellite that looks like a regular cratered rocky moon with lunar dragons on the surface. When illuminated at night it glows a soft white almost golden color. This moon's lunar cycle is what the calendar is based on. It is also the moon most associated with lycanthropy.

Calendar system is all 12's 288 days in a year 12 months of 24 days. 24 is one lunar cycle (12 waxing 12 waning could be the two weeks)

The 12 months are named after gaias first twelve beasts fantastical versions of the animals that make up the twelve zodiacs. The days are named after

Days of the week named after base elements (light earth air fire water dark; in that order)

1. Lumiday
2. Terriday
3. Zephidday
4. Embidday
5. Aquiday
6. Voidday

Crystal Sphere

Surrounding the entirety of the solar system is a metaphysical barrier.

Torm's Wanderers guard the crystal sphere from malevolent breaches. Evil aligned entities may face a horde of undead with the sole purpose of defending the solar system.

Torm's wanderers are a group of lost souls who in the last moments of their life attempted to redeem themselves for selfish purposes hoping their soul would not be judged too harshly. These liars did not truly rebuke their actions on life they simply attempted to deceive the universe itself and as such are not a part of a semi ethereal border separating the physical from the metaphysical. These wanderers bar extraterrestrial entry into the Rithmia sphere

Rithmia is the fourth planet out of 8 in its solar system.

Nursery rhyme to remember the names of each new moon.

*The first glimpse of a waxing night is followed by a Hallowed sky.
 Before fate arrives, the light grows until rebirth
 The flood nourishes until the night sky blossoms the sweet sight draws passion forth and manifests
 The lovers who so passionately swarm across the night sky harvesting the fruits of labor and glory of the hunter's
 Then retreating from the dark desolation of night and the cold of winter before the last wane.*

Meno (prefix meaning month so these literally mean month of ___ (' = of)) Meno' pronounced meh-no-ah (like menoa)
 Names of the months:

1. Meno'hallow
2. Meno'fate
3. Meno'rebirth
4. Meno'flood
5. Meno'blossom
6. Meno'sweet
7. Meno'lovers
8. Meno'swarm
9. Meno'harvest
10. Meno'hunters
11. Meno'dark
12. Meno'cold

Rithmia's Zodiac's are based on the following animals: These are often the names of the months amongst druidic circles.

1. Aquervio - The Koi Waterbearer:

Description: The Elemental Waterbearer is an massive fish with a nearly watery form. It carries an amphora filled with liquid starlight, pouring celestial waters to nurture the land. Even though it is called a koi it is the size of a blue whale and acts more akin to the whales we know on Earth. It's body has color patterns that seem to shift with the tides themselves.

2. Aigleboom- The Thunder Griffon:

Fast and fierce. A symbol of freedom. Often associated with lightning storms as their screech pierces like thunder.

3. Embazio - The Flaming Ram:

Description: The Flame Ram is a majestic creature with shimmering, fiery wool that glows like embers. Its powerful horns are adorned with mystical runes that channel the elemental power of fire.

4. Stonius - The Stone Bull:

Description: The Stone Bull is a colossal creature made entirely of living stone. Its hooves create seismic tremors as it walks, and its gaze can petrify anything that meets its eyes.

5. Twilith - The Celestial Dragonfly:

Description: The Celestial dragonfly is an ethereal beings, each with a body of twinkling stars. They are connected by a physical bioluminescent tether that bonds the two beings which allows them to communicate through celestial whispers.

Rithmia

Tuesday, December 27, 2022 11:22 PM

Rithmia is a large Planet almost twice the size of Earth. There are 6 continents: Bredoa, Ikothon, Alnahrayn, Salphas, and Glaushun and the sixth is a large frozen dessert on the northern pole Goliath/Giants ferry prisoners and those to be executed to this dessert like is a fucked up torture australia. The wildlife here is insane and resulted in wild undead as well but a few small settlements have popped up. The two contents Bredoa and Ikothon are only separated by a single river/straight. The largest continent of Glaushun has a large inland sea (sea of stars). These three make up a cluster and are each the top three most populated continents. The last two continents Alnahrayn and Salphas are large islands somewhat separated from the rest of the other three. Salphas is dominated by cold weather and is closest to the polar cap. Alnahrayn has large dense jungles.,

The Elements (EEP)

Tuesday, December 27, 2022 11:09 PM

This plane is a globe made upon two different 4 way venom diagrams where the center where they all overlap are the positive and negative energy planes with chaos blanketed on top and mixing into the primal plane below. Here is where stars and black holes are created at each pole. The elements mix with pure positivity to make star hearts which combust and the core is a path to a pure positive energy plane surrounded by swirling mixing out the elements combining into the like three mixture groups which is why stars are doing outer elemental stuff

Elemental Energy Plane (EEP) (Altaaqat Al'awalia)

<https://i.4pcdn.org/tg/1482256976585.pdf>

This Elemental Energy plane serves two purposes. Originally this was a prison where primordials were sent before the calming of rithmia which happened just before the Creation of Mortals (~8,500PD).

Genies are sentient beings who have an elemental infused soul (Note: Genies are elemental infused souls bound to the EEP genasi are partially elemental infused souls therefore they may reincarnate on the EEP creating a new genie soul under these rare circumstances). Technically created through a leak in the Path of Reincarnation which acted like a magnet pulling lost souls who had been infused with great amounts of elemental energy towards their respective element. During this time the plane was Elemental chaos. Earth, air, fire, and water mixed and swirled with little separation. Through their innate connection with the realm some great sorcerer genies were able to tame vast areas of the plane. Once dragons matured and gained the ability to use arcane arts they travelled to the plain and followed suit. As they did so they left elemental vortex's in their wake all across Rithmia. Seeing the rise in these great powers as an opportunity to bolster their extra planar forces the gods took great interest in this growing rivalry. The gods push and pulled at the elementally adept species mainly, the dragons, genies, and giants. Before her sundering The Allmother was in command of all the elements as part of her Domain. With her loss of strength and sanity due to splitting herself in half these powers had gone ungoverned for millennia. War broke out as several heralds all at once appeared and declared the victors and four strongest contestants of this new war would be crowned as the heads of a new (lesser deity) pantheon known as the Elemental Pantheon. Therefore, the Elemental War began. Afterwards some Genies claiming they should have not had to fight for the right to the pantheon were very bitter at the loss of this war and retreated to the new organized version of the Elemental Chaos now deemed the Elemental Energy Plane in order to get stronger, strategize, and craft new powerful items. Genies have conquered large portions of these lands as their own as the only draconic residents are the new heads of the elemental pantheon and their families / chosen mortals. With this the retreat Genies often left behind cities they were in charge of and the populous now have mixed feelings about genies. Genies were known to leave treasure hoards guarded by mummies behind. This EEP lies just beyond the border ethereal (it probably exists in the sixth dimension) and acts as the world's atmosphere that burns up whatever comes through it. Extra planar threats have to go through some part in order to breach into the prime material plane. The vast EEP is divided into the following sections:

Pure Partitions:

1. Earth
2. Air
3. Fire
4. Water

Duo-partitions:

1. Earth + Air Overlap:

- (+) Leviterra, The Plane of Magnetism: This plane is a realm where floating islands made of earth and stone drift through the sky. It's a place of serene beauty, with lush forests and majestic mountains suspended in the air. Winged creatures and air elementals inhabit this realm, and gravity works differently here.
 - o Creatures
 - Magnetic Mantas: These creatures are similar to manta rays, but they have the ability to generate and manipulate magnetic fields. They use these fields to navigate through the air currents around the floating islands and to communicate with other creatures.
 - Magnetic Minnows: These small fish-like creatures are attracted to magnetic fields and can often be found swimming in the crystalline rivers and waterfalls that flow from the islands.
 - Aeromagnetic Anomalies: These creatures are small, insect-like creatures that have the ability to generate powerful magnetic fields. They use these fields to levitate and move through the air currents around the floating islands.
- (+) NEW REPLACEMENT FOR PLANE OF MAGNETISM
- The plane of thunder (other names would be like reverberation or fulmination)
- (-) Dustlorn, The Plane of Sandstorm: This is a desolate and barren wasteland where storms of razor-sharp earth and swirling winds dominate. The landscape is marked by endless canyons and dust storms, and it's a harsh environment for those who venture here.

2. Earth + Fire Overlap:

- (+) Magmaforge, The plane of Lava: Magmaforge is a plane of fiery forges and molten rivers. The land is rich with precious minerals, and skilled blacksmiths craft incredible weapons and artifacts. The inhabitants are resilient beings, like lava golems and fire dwarves, who harness the power of both earth and fire.
- (-) Ashen Wast plane of ash: Ashen Wastes is a scorched realm covered in smoldering volcanoes and rivers of flowing lava. The air is thick with smoke and ash, and it's a harsh, unforgiving place filled with destructive fire elementals.

3. Earth + Water Overlap:

- Positively Themed Plane - Terraquatica The plane of wood: Terraquatica is a paradise of lush forests and crystal-clear lakes. The earth and water intertwine, giving rise to vibrant flora and aquatic creatures. Nymphs and dryads coexist with water elementals, and it's a realm of natural beauty and harmony.
- Negatively Themed Plane - Murkmire, The plane of mud: Murkmire is a swampy, marshland where stagnant water mixes with decaying vegetation. It's a grim place, filled with treacherous bogs, monstrous creatures, and eerie, whispering spirits.

4. Air and Fire Overlap:

- Positively Themed Plane - Zephyrflame, The plane of combustion: Zephyrflame is a realm of perpetual dawn, where fiery winds carry luminous embers through the sky. It's a land of warmth and gentle breezes, inhabited by graceful phoenixes, sylphs, and fire-dancing beings. It's a place of inspiration and creativity.
- Negatively Themed Plane - Infernal Gale, The plane of smoke: Infernal Gale is a turbulent and dangerous plane where raging firestorms and hurricane-like winds create a chaotic, destructive environment. Fire elementals and volatile air spirits battle for supremacy in this unpredictable and perilous realm.

5. Air and Water Overlap:

- Positively Themed Plane - Celestiaquas, Plane of ice: Celestiaquas is a realm of serene, floating islands where the air and water merge seamlessly. It's a place of peace and tranquility, where merfolk and cloud-dwelling beings coexist. The skies are filled with radiant rainbows, and the seas are frozen as cold misty air freezes the water as it falls off the snowy islands.
- Negatively Themed Plane - Tempest Depths, Plane of storm: Tempest Depths is a realm of endless storms, with violent tornadoes, typhoons, and water spouts. It's an unforgiving environment for those who dare to venture here, inhabited by fearsome water elementals and stormy spirits.

6. Fire and Water Overlap:

- Positively Themed Plane - Aquablaze Haven, The plane of steam: Aquablaze Haven is a unique world where water and fire exist in harmony. The landscape features mesmerizing geysers, steamy jungles, and peaceful hot springs. Inhabitants are both fire-wielding aquatic creatures and water-resistant fire beings.
- Negatively Themed Plane - Vapor Bayou, The plane of mist: Steamscorch Wastes is a place of hot uncomfortable humid hot swamps blanketed in a layer of mist. The ground is rough obsidian like stone. Small vents and searing geysers spout out through cracks in the ground. The land is barren and unforgiving, inhabited by volatile steam elementals and scalding lava creatures.

Tri-partitions:

1. Earth, Air, and Fire Overlap (Solar, radiant, weak force):

- Positively Themed Plane - Crystalline Skies: This realm is a wondrous fusion of earth, air, and fire elements. It features floating crystal mountains, radiant geysers of molten gemstones, and swirling currents of magical winds. Inhabitants are graceful crystal beings that harness the power of these elements for creation and art. In particular, the weak force can change one quark type into another. Protons and neutrons are made of two quark varieties, up and down. The weak force can turn a down quark in a neutron into an up quark, which would change the neutron into a proton and switch its electric charge from neutral to positive. If that neutron were in the nucleus of an atom, the change to a proton would turn that atom into a different type of element. Such reactions are happening all the time in our Sun, giving it the energy to shine. This type of action also occurs in radioactive decay, which happens when atoms spontaneously shed energy and subatomic particles. So earth and fire combine into lava and metallic volcanic rock are whisked away with the forces of magnetism but when the three combine into a "Solar bubble" the bubble of radiance is the first sign of this odd force.
 - At its center: In the mystical heart of the multiverse, hidden from the realm of matter and energy as we know it, lies the enigmatic Wyrdflux Confluence—a plane born from the obscure and elusive forces of the weak nuclear interaction. Far realm

Wednesday, December 28, 2022 1:28 PM

Blade of the Void Walker: A powerful wandering adventurer now nicknamed Void walker Kassadin was the first to open and enter a portal to the far realm. The horrors of the universe corrupted him mind and body to the point where years later he spilled out right where the portal was (possibly as a star spawn of some kind) after being slain his trusted (residuum) dagger was also corrupted leaving the Blade of the Voidwalker in the space.

https://www.dandwiki.com/wiki/Blade_of_the_Void_Walker_\(5e_Equipment\)) this was recovered by the city of bourmur using the orrery of the wanderer and at some point ends up in the masters library.

The far realm is what is beyond the stars. Beyond the prime material plane.

Home of the outer gods. Beings that transcend space and time. Each based on a light of the visible light spectrum currently the only one to make their presence known to the material plane is the Purple Pharoh, The Unspeakable One

If you are wondering if the universe plus an additional 38 planes wasn't enough the Far Realm is quite literally everything else. This is a realm of madness, and entropy. Nothing that enters leaves. Most mortals can't fathom what the realm itself manifests as and would not last longer than a few seconds even if no creatures were to find them.

Planes of law

LG Empyrean divine domain of Ados(Natives: archons have seemingly metallic skin) home of platinum dragons

LN Purgatory divine domain of Janus the last stop on the river of souls

LE Hell divine domain of asmodeus

Each made of layers that are very loosely connected

Planes of balance

NG Nirvana divine domain of ____ originally before they were devoured, leaving a hole in the center of nirvana, now divine domain of Lemos. Nirvana is the birthplace of the angels and the Deva. Of the outsiders in the upper planes these appear the most human/mortal as all of them were mortal in a previous life. These are the few races of outsiders never created by a deity.

NN The outlands: originally divine domain of the allmother and her twin brother ____ who combined to be the beginning and end of all sentient life before The Consumer devoured The Allmothers twin brother and she was split into two. Now no deity holds domain and it a plane of pure neutrality with no intervening force. It is the first stop on the river of souls. Infinite plane with all kinds of terrain and creatures in any direction. Has a center a spire with the city of sigil resting at the top ruled by the lady of pain, whose origin is largely unknown. The most notable thing about the lady of pain is any who worship her as if she was a deity are banished from sigil and the outlands immediately

NE Abaddon home to daemons, and the four horseman of the apocalypse. plane of pure destruction beginning of the river of styx itself, Caldor the Iron lord holds domain over the war section with the horseman of war however, he realizes all four horseman are out to destroy all even him, they are not allies. Its good to remember that the gods did not create these planes but are bound to the energies of the planes. Caldor did not invent decay he merely embodies it and holds domain over war and destruction as it is a fundamental aspect of life.

Planes of chaos

CG elysium realm of guilded warriors divine domain of gharian

CN ataxia realm of pure arcane power/chaos divine domain of xinthris

CE the abyss home of the demons and demon lords. Infinite layers make up this plane and no two layers are identical. Pure chaos for the purpose of corruption and destruction.

The river of souls is an interplaner metaphysical "river" made of some unknown material. Zeisis the reaper holds this entire river as their domain. Appearing as a skeletal grim reaper hundreds of feet tall steering a black ship equally proportional to him. The black cloak constantly tears creating grim reapers (the creature) to collect souls and bring them to the river. See this boat and Zeisis exist everywhere on the river constantly starting at the beginning for each new soul that must be brought to Janus

Astral Sea:

All of these domains exist within the astral sea (the universe) different colored floating whirlpools can take astral travellers in spelljammer ships to these different planes. Each plane also has an attuned element that a certain enchanted tuning fork made of that specific element can take

Fey realm / Primal Plane: <https://5e.tools/book.html#dod>

Attributes | Description

--- | ---

Titles | Plane of Faerie, Pureworld

Alignment | Any Non-neutral

Inhabitants | Fey, Eldest, Extreme aspects of mundane life

Divinities | Archfey courts

This echo of the material plane is suffused with potent magic, and unrestrained emotions. The Fey realm is a place of unrestrained and awe-inspiring natural beauty. The plane is always bathed in twilight of the setting (or perhaps rising) sun, with lanterns and fireflies providing additional, haunting lights

Shadowfell / Shadow Plane

Attributes | Description

--- | ---

Titles | Plane of Sorrow, Shadowfell

Alignment | Any Evil alignment

Inhabitants | Darklings, Shadar-kai, Velstraces, Vampires, Undead

Divinities | Zeisis

The Shadow Plane is coexistent with both the Material Plane and Primal Plane, and seems to be a warped reflection of the former. It is a plane where the things born here have their colors, sounds, tastes, and all other forms of perception lessened.

Zeisis, The Reaper has a resting place here. While they never leave the river of souls they do have a home outside of it. When The Reaper feels it is their time to pass on. They return here. This usually causes great upheaval around the multiverse due to the boat floating souls through the river of souls has no commandeer, so the souls wander lost, and do not always end up where they are supposed to, and they are never on time.

If the primal plane shows the absolute domination of nature this plane is the absolute domination of industrialization. Complete triumph over nature. Soulless mechanicalization of all things. See movie mad god for inspiration

Ethereal Plane

Attributes | Description

--- | ---

Titles | Plane of Ghosts, The In-Between

Alignment | Any Neutral

Inhabitants | Ghosts, Phase spider, Xill

Divinities | Torm

Sometimes referred to as The Spiritual Plane this ethereal border separates the physical from the metaphysical. This border plane is what separates the material and primal planes from the outer sphere. In the Ethereal Plane around the Rithmiasphere is where Torm's Wanderers guard the solar system of extra planar and extraterrestrial threats. Where on the Material where a city might exist, on the Plane of Shadow in its place may be ruins or some twisted representation of that city's populous. Distances do not correlate between the planes, however, so that a person who takes a short walk on the Shadow Plane might find herself transported leagues away after returning to the Material Plane.

Astral Sea

Attributes | Description

--- | ---

Titles | The Cognitive Realm, The Nebula

Alignment | Any

Inhabitants | Astral dreadnoughts, astradaemons

Divinities | Mawara

Also known as The Cognitive Plane this is the vast cosmic sea that exists in parallel with the material plane. It is a strange and confusing plane where spelljammers roam and connections exist to all outer planes. Weaving through this astral sea is the River of Souls. A metaphysical river in which souls are ferried by Zeisis, The Reaper to their reincarnation plane after one of Zeisis' servants known as psychopomps has delivered the soul to Janus, The Judge in his realm inside Purgatory where all journeys after death begin. It is Janus' duty to determine the next phase to the souls reincarnation cycle. This river flows into and out of each plane in the outer sphere and either ends in the material plane in the mortals next life or in a plane that the soul has strong binds to. While rare it has been known for souls to have been blessed by the elements of the inner sphere. In this case the soul is allowed to flow on the river of souls but doesn't make it back to the material and their soul is reborn as a genie in a specific elemental energy plane.

Cognitive Dimensions

Saturday, September 30, 2023 5:29 AM

The dimension of dreams and dimension of time are ethereal cognitive dominions. Just as the outer planes and planetary spheres float in the astral sea these two exists all throughout the ethereal plane however are somewhat "close" to the astral sea.

Dimension of Dreams

Attributes | Description

--- | ---

Titles | The Dreamlands, The Nightmare Realm

Inhabitants | Leng Ghouls

Divinities | The Unspeakable One

Existing somehow within the Ethereal Plane in a semi-permanent realm formed from the slumbering desires or mortals. Some grand nations have been created by Great Old Ones and other Outer Gods simply by dreaming them into reality. These pockets are made of "dreamscapes", demiplanes within the Dreamlands created by a sleeping creature. Typically the dreamer is the only one who can access this dreamscape and therefore the rest of the plane; however, powerful occult magic users have found a way to travel into and out of any dreamscape. The core is a collection of dreamscapes. The only known permanent core dreamscape is one called Leng, an unusually stable area that is the divine domain of The Unspeakable, and other beings of the Elder Mythos.

Dimension of Time (https://pathfinderwiki.com/wiki/Dimension_of_Time)

Titles | The Endless wheel, The Loop

Inhabitants | Hounds of Tindalos, Irii, Siktempora

Divinities | The Watcher

Not much is known about this dimension. Scholars who discover it and are unfortunate enough to find their way to this dimension are nearly always lost to time. Time is soft and relative to every square foot.

The Dimension of Time cannot be reached by conventional planar travel, and no tuning fork attuned to it is known to exist. Also while travelers don't return their items are known to appear in the material plane through unknown means. The only known texts about this dimension describe landing on the Desolate Shore, traversing the Viridescent Jungle, crossing the Billowy Sea before their raft 'detaches' from the shore and carries them to a city at the center of The Green Meadow called Stethelos. Looming above all buildings is a 225-foot-tall porphyry dome covering the Well of All, source of the anima mundi and the convergence point of the flow of time. Time seems to move slower the closer you get to the Well of All. The longer a planes walker stays in the desolate shore the more time passes outside this plane.

Synchronicity

Wednesday, December 20, 2023

4:39 PM

A synchronicity is a period of time in which the material plane become coterminous with a different plane of existence. This happens most often with the plane of shadow and the feywild. Last time it happened with an outer plane was with the nine hells. During this point Tiamat was residing in Avernus and took the opportunity to corrupt hundreds of chromatic dragons who had recently achieved great power by winning the war of the elements just a few centuries before.

Afterlife (Path of Reincarnation)

Tuesday, December 27, 2022 11:09 PM

All souls who die must walk the path and face Janus and face Acumen's Gate. Janus weilds the Eyes of Bahamut would peer at every soul and judge the duality of their soul as no one is true in all senses of the word. If deemed worthy of a new beginning they would cross the gate and be reincarnated. If not they are forced to walk and wonder what it takes to be worthy. Souls of Rithmia do not find heaven or hell in the afterlife. Either they find rebirth immediately or eventually.

Those wholly devoted to a deity or specific ideology to the end will have the ability to join that divine domain as an eternal denizen whenever this happens the deity creates a new soul with the help (and the essence) of the newly ascended.

Every dog who passes becomes a psychopomp for Janus, followers of Janus revere dogs and wolves similarly as Hindus view cows like a sacred animal. This means every dogs afterlife is playing fetch in some form.

Mt. Heaven

Thursday, August 15, 2024 1:58 PM

LG Heaven divine domain of Ados(Natives: archons have seemingly metallic skin) home of platinum dragons

Attributes | Description

--- | ---

Titles | Mount Celestia, The Holy Mountain

Alignment | Lawful Good

Inhabitants | Archons, Angels, Celestials, Inevitables

Divinities | Ados

The Lawful good plane of order, compassion, and goodness. Even though it is infinitely large, it appears to visitors as a gigantic single mountain with a flat summit. It is broken down into seven regions, or levels, six of which are overseen by a steward of immense power. Heaven takes the form of an immense mountain, surrounded by shimmering walls of glass and gold that have been hardened to be as strong as iron. Each one of the seven tiers on the mountain is tasked with a different purpose, but the position of one level over another does not represent any kind of superiority. Each of them is guided by a steward, whose purpose is not to rule, but to help organize the residents of each level and serve as an official authority on all matters pertaining to that tier.

Heaven is the home of the Archons, who serve as its administrators, guards, and soldiers. They are born either from the souls of righteous petitioners, or are formed from the very substance of Heaven itself. Heaven is also filled with countless species of angels and other lawful celestials.

In order from bottom to top of the mountain the seven levels of Heaven are:

1. The Threshold, tasked with hospitality and defense Stewarded by The Lord of the Wall and the Lord of the Gate
2. Proelera, the mustering ground of Heaven's armies Stewarded by The Voice of the Shining Host
3. Clarion, dedicated to duty and self-purification Stewarded by The High Preceptor
4. Requius, the final resting place of virtuous souls who did not follow a particular deity in life Stewarded by The Shepherd of the Wanderers
5. Illumis, where residents gather to discuss philosophy and the nature of goodness Stewarded by The Chief Moderator
6. Iudica, Heaven's administrative center Stewarded by The Council of Vision. The Council has three members known as The Head, The Heart, and The Hand representing knowledge/wisdom, love/salvation, and righteous action respectfully.
7. The peak of the mountain is flattened and contains somewhat of a mystery. A golden wall with a single gate provides access to the beautiful Garden. Some say that a huge fruit tree can be found at the center of it, while others claim to have seen an immense, empty throne. The gate to the Garden always remains open, its doors having wasted away eons ago.

Inside the mountain itself a huge cavern hold the Forge of Creation. Where Ados tirelessly works away. Crafting the Army of Heaven. The Archons stay in Heaven as defense and occasionally come to the aid of mortals who need their help. The Inevitables are sent out to purge the universe of vile creatures, mostly those in Abbadon and The Abyss.

Pools of Purgatory

Thursday, August 15, 2024 1:58 PM

LN Purgatory divine domain of Janus the last stop on the river of souls

Attributes | Description

--- | ---

Titles | Trail of Rebirth

Alignment | Lawful Neutral

Inhabitants | Psychopomps, Shinigami, Souls, Aeons, Decanines

Divinities | Janus

The last stop on the river of souls. Purgatory appears as a vast heptagon with a terrace at each edge that peer into different aspects of the soul, the souls true essence. The landscape is flat, barren, and largely colorless, yet soft songs can be heard radiating from the pools of soul essence.

Janus, The Judge resides in his domain the Veiled Halls. This grand temple sits in a garden garden of pale yet undying flowers in the center of this plane. The Veiled Hall is a massive gothic cathedral made of ivory. The enourmos front doors are guarded by one of The Judge's most powerful psychopomps simply named "Eight" (Maybe a Fulgati). Inside the floor is checkered marble white and black tiles. Stark red veils line the interior. Here Janus holds court for each soul brought by the Ferrier Zeisis, The Reaper or one of his psychopomps. Janus decides if each soul should be bound to a certain plane of existence or if it should be reincarnated in the material plane.

At each edge of the heptagonal plane is a large pool nearly the size of an ocean. These multicolored pools of liquid hold vast quantities of a strange healing material, referred to as Quintessence. A few souls who have lost parts of their soul and need to be repaired stay in purgatory in a pool to heal the fractured soul.

The pools represent healings needed for a certain character flaw (like the classic 7 sins). Each is overlooked by a high platform where a powerful Aeon called an Akhana. These creatures have four gray arms project from a swirling mass resembling a giant eye, from which a tail-like appendage dangles. These creatures may also roam the multiverse but the Arch-Akhana guard the 7 pools of purgatory.

Once a soul is rebuilt or when ready for reincarnation they are brought to the veiled hall here is the final pool. Janus and his herald, the black dog and The King of Grim, Spike. Here Janus and the Soul commune with the Pool of Rebirth to decide the best course of action for the soul to grow into one truly strong.

While psychopomps are the servants of The Reaper, some are created by Janus and stay loyal to The Judge while fulfilling their duty to bring souls of the dead to the afterlife. Chief amongst these is the souls of all dogs are transitioned to Decainies, black dogs with red eyes that play fetch with souls and bones for eternity. Their greatest purpose is to hunt all manner of undead creatures.

Wandering the grey expanse between the Veiled Halls and the Pools are the Shinigami. Absolute, impartial, and merciless. These creatures are harbingers of death. Their purpose to to impose a quick, deserved death to those who would seek to disrupt eh delicate balance of life. They do not take pleasure in anything. A few Shinigami have been known to go rouge for various reason. Either granting more merciful deaths or more despicable forms of execution and have been swayed to be more lawful good or lawful evil respectfully. Often referred to angels of death by those saved by a Shinigami due to their tendency to be fair arbiters and listen to the voice of the oppressed. They view all mortals as another living being and do not judge (As "that is their masters job"). Shingami's are 9feet tall humanoids with skeletal wings extending from their shoulders and scythes made of bone, often robed in black wearing some large hat or mask that covers their face.

Various other lawful neutral beings often those associated with domains of death, grave, fate also inhabit the rocky bone like terrain. These include bone/crypt dragons

Aeons are an inscrutable family of monitors who serve to preserve order and balance throughout the planes. They constantly maintain a balance between pairs of forces beyond the knowledge of mortals.

The Nine Hells

Thursday, August 15, 2024 1:58 PM

LE Hell divine domain of asmodeus

Attributes | Description

--- | ---

Titles | The Pit, The Nine layers of Hell

Alignment | Lawful Evil

Inhabitants | Dvils, Asuras, Hellspawn

Divinities | Asmodeus

Inverted cone of nine layers each ruled by an archdevil. It is a plane of sinister wickedness and institutional cruelty, its denizens organized into a strict caste system with a very rigid chain of command. Each of the nine Hells had its own physical laws or properties of matter, but all were inhospitable or deadly to outsiders.

Each layer of the Nine Hells embodies a particular sin, as described in the sections that follow. Feel free to add other sins, but be careful when you do. Some classical interpretations of sins shouldn't be used in any adventure. Others, such as lust or gluttony, should be handled very carefully. Also the depth of the layer does not mean we are claiming that one sin is worse / less evil than another. They were organized by Asmodeus, The Devil so the order may be a plot in and of itself to deceive.

The order of the levels and sins are as follows:

1. Avernus, Layer of Anger, The sin of anger fuels wrath, vengeance, and inner turmoil. Ruled by a new Archdevil that Asmodeus has taken a liking to, known simply as The Outcast (one of the apocalyptic deities)
2. Dis, Layer of Murder, Killing an innocent or family member is evil business that comes home to roost in Dis. Ruled by Archdevil Dispater.
3. Minauros, Layer of Greed, Ruled by Mammon
4. Phlegethos, Layer of Jealousy, Ruled by two Archdevils Belial, and Fierna.
5. Stygia, Layer of Betrayal, Ruled by Levistus
6. Malbolge, Layer of Oppression, Ruled by Glasya
7. Maladomini, Layer of Deceit, Ruled by Baalzebul
8. Cania, Layer of Harm/Cruelty, Ruled by Mephistopheles
9. Nessus, Layer of Pride, Ruled by Asmodeus, The devil themselves. Some say this is the original sin which led to all other sins. This is the sins that led to the fall of Asmodeus and thus is his domain.

An Unjust Universe

Some players may be uncomfortable if a soul is consigned to the Nine Hells for a sin when the person so condemned lived a good life in aggregate. However, all the souls consigned to the Nine Hells in this adventure were deceived by Asmodeus. While they committed sins, that wasn't the reason they were consigned to the Nine Hells. However, Asmodeus ensures that the soul is punished as if the sin was the one that defined it.

Nirvana

Attributes | Description

--- | ---

Titles | The Sanctuary of Enligtenment

Alignment | Neutral Good

Inhabitants | Agathions, Celestials, Foo Dogs, Guardinals

Divinities | Lemos

Nirvana is a neutral good middle ground between the chaos of Elysium and authority of Heaven, and its natives intervene in planar matters more frequently than these other goodly realms. Mortal souls who arrive to Nirvana seek enlightenment, and the plane is open not only to the virtuous but also those seeking redemption and respite. Petitioners in Nirvana can shed their mortal memories and worries in their search for enlightenment. Nirvana is characterized by pastoral hills, breathtaking mountains, and lush woodlands. The plane meets travelers' every expectation of an idyllic, restful paradise, while behind the plane's natural beauty lies mystery and true enlightenment.

Divine domain of ____ originally before they were devoured, leaving a hole in the center of nirvana, now divine domain of Lemos. Nirvana is the birthplace of the angels and the Deva. Of the outsiders in the upper planes these appear the most human/mortal as all of them were mortal in a previous life. These are the few races of outsiders never created by a deity.

The Outlands

Attributes | Description

--- | ---

Titles | The Interplanar plane, Neutral Lands

Alignment | Neutral

Inhabitants | Any Outsider

Divinities | Gaia

The connector of all and first stop on the river of souls. This infinite plane with all kinds of terrain and creatures in any direction. Has a massive center a spire with the city of Sigil, The City of Doors resting at the top ruled by the lady of pain. Sigil has planar connections to all outer planes and planets of the material plane.

Originally divine domain of the allmother and her twin brother ____ who combined to be the beginning and end of all sentient life before The Consumer devoured The Allmothers twin brother and she was split into two. Now no deity holds domain and it a plane of pure neutrality with no intervening force. It is the first stop on the river of souls. Infinite plane with all kinds of terrain and creatures in any direction. Has a center a spire with the city of sigil resting at the top ruled by the lady of pain, whose origin is largely unknown. The most notable thing about the lady of pain is any who worship her as if she was a deity are banished from sigil and the outlands immediately

Could take inspiration from marvel / X-men's otherworld (<https://marvel.fandom.com/wiki/Otherworld>) for how this vast plane could be divided up to create a sort of nexus of all the other outer planes. This plane is referred to as The Primeval Place in ancient texts

Abaddon

Attributes | Description

--- | ---

Titles | Gehenna, Hades, The Eternal Eclipse

Alignment | Neutral Evil

Inhabitants | Daemons, night hags, soul eaters

Divinities | Caldor

This plane is a wasteland of infinite and apocalyptic proportions that is home to the daemons. It is dominated by the citadels of the Four Horseman, but includes vast stretches of uninhabited wastelands, and smaller holdings of minor warlords and vassals. Abaddon holds the headwaters of the river Styx, which flows from here out through the other lower planes of Hell and The Abyss. Most of Abaddon is unnaturally quiet, like a land depopulated by war or plague, and is covered in a cold, black mist. The air feels heavy and rotten, and what little light exists is provided by a strange, sun-like object in permanent eclipse. Caldor, The Ironlord holds domain over The Cinder Furnace with the horseman of war Szuriel however, he realizes all four horseman are out to destroy all of creation even him, they are not allies.

Home to daemons, and the four horseman of the apocalypse. plane of pure destruction beginning of the river of styx itself, Caldor the Iron lord holds domain over the war section with the horseman of war however, he realizes all four horseman are out to destroy all even him, they are not allies. Its good to remember that the gods did not create these planes but are bound to the energies of the planes. Caldor did not invent decay he merely embodies it and holds domain over war and destruction as it is a fundamental aspect of life.

Elysium

Attributes | Description

--- | ---

Titles | Realm of Heros, Valhalla

Alignment | Neutral Good

Inhabitants | Azatas, Titans, Celestials

Divinities | Gharian

The plane of Elysium is a riot of untouched wilderness, ranging from wild forests to foam-peaked seas, to impossibly high mountains, interspersed with hard-to-reach green valleys. None of the normal trappings of civilization can be found here; the natives prefer to live in small groups and, very occasionally, gather for larger meetings. To outsiders, the untamed wilds can seem harsh and uninviting, but the initiated understand its true nature: Elysium is a place promoting selfless cooperation combined with self-sufficiency and the complete lack of external authority.

Here Gharian sits on a massive throne. It is the one mechanical device in the entire plane. Crafted by Ados after the battle with the consumer that left Gharian eternally wounded. (Much like the emperor of man) He is in near comatose and is using all his life energy to keep light pumping through the sun and joy in the world

Ataxia

Attributes | Description

--- | ---

Titles | Violet Void, Limbo

Alignment | Chaotic Neutral

Inhabitants | Proteans, Slaad, Chaos beasts

Divinities | Xinthris

A realm of pure arcane power and the chaos of magic itself. This plane is supreme chaos, a twisting, quicksilver place filled with bits and pieces of rocks, trees, the four elements, entire landscapes, strong winds, and random pockets of liquid, solid, or gas. Sentient beings could dampen down the chaos to livable levels and produce a safe environment as long as they maintained concentration. The size of a safe zone was directly related to the intelligence of the individual controller.

The Abyss

Attributes | Description

Titles | The Infinite Gorge, Chaos Chasm

Alignment | Chaotic Evil

Inhabitants | Demons

Divinities | Demon Lords

The chaotic evil plane is dedicated to the rule of evil unfettered by law. The Abyssal realms are pockets in which the fabric of the Abyss has slowed its relentless, changing insanity to a near-reality pace. These places are often ruled by a demon lord, either thanks to the lord's own power over the area, or simply because demon lords are attracted to a place to build a fortress and armies. Sporadically, the demonic occupants of the Abyss will pour from planar rifts to menace one plane or another, and sometimes even tear their way into the Material Plane.

Before the battle with the consumer this plane was held back by Gaia's twin _____. He kept the realm near zero temperature so that the creatures in the infinite planes couldn't move. Now they've slowly been defrosting and invading the nearby planes.

The River of Souls

Thursday, August 15, 2024 2:23 PM

The river of souls is an interplaner metaphysical “river” made of some unknown material. Zeisis, The Reaper holds this entire river as their domain. Appearing as a skeletal grim reaper nearly a thousand feet tall steering a black ship equally proportional to him. The black cloak constantly tears creating grim reapers (the creature) to collect souls and bring them to the river. See this boat and Zeisis exist everywhere on the river constantly starting at the beginning for each new soul that must be brought to Janus

“Death is not the end. It’s merely the beginning of a new path we all must take.”

Rithmiasphere

Thursday, August 15, 2024 2:30 PM

Rithmiasphere

The solar system known as the Rithmiasphere is made up of 4 rocky planets 4 large gassy planets and two dwarf planets. The yellow star in the center is roughly 1.5 time the size of the sun we know our earth orbits. Originally when carving out a space for themselves the gods found a space with 10 planets as there were originally 10 of them. Zeisis and Gharian took it upon themselves to hold domain over the two dwarf planets as they were more interested in greater aspects of the Rithmiasphere as a whole. Gharian focused on harnessing the sun. Zeisis founded the river of souls. A place only they knew about since they were gifted the position of The Reaper by a predecessor who simply told them "Everyone takes a float down the stream eventually."

Once The Consumer wrecked havoc on the Rithmiasphere and two gods were consumed and five were heavily wounded the gods all turned their attention to a single planet. The largest of the rocky planets at the center of the system, Rithmia. Prior to this Gaia had introduced her twelve original beasts yet after all the gods turned their focus to this singular planet mortal life was breathed into Rithmia. The deities still have power on all other planets in the Rithmiasphere however these seem remarkably more chaotic than Rithmia and they often find native demigod like powers to worship instead. Another possibility is they worship some distorted version of a prime deity as holy texts do not often leave Rithmia to other planets.

The planets were held solely by a singular founding deity in the following order.

0. The Sun: Gharian
1. Vorgath: The Messenger
2. Torael: Asmodeus, The Devil
3. Kragmir: Caldor
4. Rithmia: Gaia
5. Aethon : Ados

7. Vordu : Janus, The Judge
8. Elyria: The Frigid
9. Dwarf exoplanet: Zeisis

Rithmia from the time before the influence of all the gods is well preserved as the feywild. The shadowfell was created when Gaias soul (divine heart) expelled a planes worth of sorrow.

Vorgath

Sunday, April 28, 2024

11:46 AM

Only inhabitants are about 10-12 Titan families literal primordial titan family politics

A barren, dusty planet with a thin atmosphere. Its surface is pockmarked by numerous impact craters, giving it a "blasted" appearance. Vorgath's gravity is relatively weak, making it difficult for inhabitants to establish stable settlements. The weak gravity also forces all natives to be immensely tall.

Torael

Sunday, December 24, 2023 11:16 PM

Hot planet filled with hellish rocky desert landscapes. Oceans of non water (liquid sulfur)

A rugged, cratered world with a reddish hue due to iron oxide deposits in the soil. Its landscape is dotted with twisted rock formations and steep canyons.

This planet is used as a cage for devils so unruly that asmodeus banishes them from hell using a specific seal that if they stay here long enough before returning this place becomes their home plane so he can dispose of a not have to worry about keeping them out of his business in hell

Kragnir

Sunday, December 24, 2023

11:15 PM

Lush overgrown with greenery and rich in minerals this is where a majority of the snakefolk migrated too when the scourge invaded at the end of the reptilian age

A small, terrestrial world with a breathable atmosphere and vast expanses of crystalline caverns. Kragnir's interior is home to glittering quartz deposits, which have been mined by its native inhabitants for centuries.

Deep underground is a metal that has innate abilities similar to a green lantern ring. Caldor actually created the core of this planet to be sentient and have a will of its own and the metal created to do this can extend its will similar to a lantern ring. When crafted into an item and attuned to the user they gain this ability and basically become a green lantern.

Once ancient Najara learned about the scourge and in their horror fled Rithmia a vast majority used a planetary gateway to come to Kragnir. Their reptilian nature gave them the ability to thrive in the hot humid rainforest. Here they began to sprawl out and discovered vast deposits of metals until they came into contact with the living metal and have since 2500BD been waging war for control as the living metal has seemingly turned to mindlessly slaughtering any sentient life form in its vicinity. Small subjects of snakefolk have tamed the rock and have started a faction hoping to stop the war and creating a symbiotic relationship between snake and man (could either lead to them returning to Rithmia or could lead to them becoming one with the machine or both)

For reference this world would be just inside what would be considered the habitable zone for humans so it is very hot average temperatures are around 130-150 degrees

Rithmia

Thursday, August 15, 2024 2:58 PM

Originally terraformed by Gaia after she purged the Yith from the planet to create a hospitable world

Aethon

Thursday, August 15, 2024 2:54 PM

The largest planet in the system, Aethon is a gaseous behemoth with swirling clouds of lavender and amethyst hues. Its atmosphere is alive with electromagnetic energy, generating spectacular light displays that can be seen across the system.

Some of the Snakefolk jumped here during the first scourge invasion. Unstable habitats and excess electromagnetic energy caused full season of lightning storms months long. Only ruins of their temporary dwellings remain after being battered by storms. Some ancestors

Khthon

Thursday, August 15, 2024 2:59 PM

A gas giant of immense power, Khthon's atmosphere crackles with electrical discharges that can ignite comets and small asteroids in its vicinity. Its cloudy layers are home to a unique species of aeromancers, who harness the planet's energy for their magical arts. These aeromancers, named Alecti (short for Alspidchelone), are gigantic whales who seem to be able to breathe in nearly any environment.

Mixing the raw power of ether, air, water, and lightning these are one of the few natural beings with control over electromagnetism and slight control over pandemonium itself. Created by Xinthris these sentient creatures have a long lasting oral tradition that spans since their creation. Known for having excellent memories they are kind towards any creature small enough that has never attacked them. They communicate through song which to most sounds like deep rumbling but every vibration length and frequency combination essentially translates to a part of their language.

Can use the kindori as inspiration for the alecti

Vordu

Sunday, February 26, 2023 5:30 PM

Where kyrzin and the symbiotes are from.

Oceans of spores like tress of the emerald sea

7 continents dot the land each of which have a primordial version of a creature that lives with Janus in his divine realm.

Elyria

Thursday, August 15, 2024 3:00 PM

The most beautiful and serene of the gas giants, Elyria's atmosphere shimmers with iridescent colors, like an oil droplet on water. Its moon-like system is home to numerous smaller celestial bodies, which reflect Elyria's light in dazzling patterns across the cosmos. No native species currently resides on this planet. It is a cold dark landscape devoid of any leftover of civilization. It's creator long past instilled upon it the nothingness of immortality.

Dwarf Exoplanet

Scourge invasion

Friday, February 3, 2023 9:34 PM

The scourge have a 4 step plan to consume all life on a planet turn its surface into star dust and shatter it like glass and spread themselves even further into the galaxy.

The scourge spread through stardust but they ingest the far realms so it is a possibility they emerge from a portal as well

Stage one: the feral stage

The first scourge broodlings and crawlers emerge from creatures who have ingested stardust (remember kids not even once). The scourge assimilate as many creatures as they can constantly growing and evolving and combining. The true goal of this first stage is to establish a grave mind/elder brain on planet to lead them. Maybe this time they use a dragon

Stage two: the coordinated stage

Scourge evolve far enough to have leaders conducting the hive mind like war generals

Humanoid scourge (thinkers)

Stage three: the burrowing stage

Scourge dig into the ground and kill all subterranean life and draw life from plants just below the surface turning everything into this grayish purple material that crystallizes into a opaque pink "star dust"

Stage four: the shattering stage

The burrowed scourge combined into one great being called yith'zizctal that every square foot of their body bubbles and expands into new scourge crawlers that constantly fall off of it

Pillars of restraint

Saturday, February 18, 2023 7:49 AM

<https://2e.aonprd.com/Monsters.aspx?!D=1252>

Guarded by gold dragons (least corruptible) and Righteous Sentinels, order of paladins

Forged by Ados the architect

Placed into the earth by a previous reaper who was a little more masochistic

The allmother split herself into two parts and ripped the body of Rithmia open allowing Gharian to smite Yith'Zizctal into a cage crafted by Caldor the ironlord

Sealed with lock and key by Asmodeus

Xinthis and Janus were holding together a tear in reality caused by the death of two deities.

8 is such a strange number. There were 10 deities originally but two were consumed by Yith'Zizctal consuming their names and all memories of them

In books detailing the founding of Rithmiaspace there is room for two more gods and when the number of beings who founded this material plane they say the number is 10.

Pillars are made of an electromagnetic metal that draws it back to its original form. This is why shards of restraint are drawn back to the pillar they came from. If a pillar were to be destroyed, that would mean the attackers have some way to nullify this property or completely destroy it.

Overview

Saturday, January 7, 2023 11:08 AM

Glaushun has 3 seasons, hot, cold, transition. The hot and cold seasons are each 4 months long and the transition seasons are each 2 months long but each season is moderately temperate. Overall this should be the most diverse continent with a "melting pot feel" similar to America and west asia/middle east. From the Age of Division on this was an essentially abandoned continent, dotted with relics and the sole survivor of that age in the Pharaoh of Dust. This is why it was used as the main battlefield for the war of elements and still holds great impact from that cosmic game. It is clear to see immigration patterns of the other continents throughout the land in the age of myth. Kobolds sailed south to the cragged savahanna from the rust woods, and hopeless expanse. Goliaths immigrated to the northern stonelands and large amounts of animal kin founded cities in the Grazing Plains and moved in to the serpent gardens. The interior still holds some ancient settlements of elves and dwarves tucked and isolating themselves, however most of the settlements are not yet developed into nations and are the remnants of fortresses and citadels built for wartime. Due to their nature large chunks of land was hoarded by dragons who still kept giants or geniekin under their rule. Some of the humanoids in the area gained independence through rebellion like Vaeturnum.

Stormy Willows

Saturday, January 7, 2023 11:08 AM

Stormy Willows: A background for the genasi boys.

Hobgoblins were the largest "civilized" group in the forest besides the elves. The elves had amazing archers, spys, green knights, and mages that were able to keep the hobgoblin attacks at bay. Just before you left you had heard the hobgoblins were retreating to the mountains of the Earthspur range. Now for nearly a thousand years the wood elves have taken residence since isolating themselves in the new growth of the Stormy Willows which sprung up during the war of the elements which created the sea of stars, where there original home was. Displaced they have rebuilt but in doing so have push the goblinoids north towards the mountains. Then a grudge between a green dragon and the witch queen saw the release of hundreds of demons from the once sacred Pool of Echos. Now a large section of the forest is uninhabitable and the goblinoids were further displaced to the mountains.

Demographics:

Wood elves 53%
Goblinoids: 38%
Giants: 7%
Treants: 2%

Witherwaste

Witherwaste (Empire of the Ghouls)

Ruled by lich the ghoulempire, the pharaoh of ash and dust, The Everplague
Based on the Ghoulempire from TOB.

The Witherwaste was once a vast swampy rainforest ruled by a magocratic alliance who were very curious about the Najara Kingdom whose relics and underground inverted ziggurats dot the landscape. Then an extremely dangerous magic ritual was conducted to not only turn the soon to be Ghoulempire into an undead lich but also gave him an advanced form of mummy rot that could turn any mortal into an undead mummy creature.

Certainly! Here's a detailed puzzle for the characters to solve within the circular room of the fantasy pyramid:

The Puzzle: The Eternal Clockwork

Room Description:
- Shape and Structure: The room is perfectly circular with smooth, obsidian walls that are eerily reflective. The floor is made of polished black stone inlaid with intricate, glowing runes that form a complex pattern resembling a celestial clock. In the center of the room is a large, ancient clockwork mechanism partially embedded in the floor. The mechanism consists of interlocking gears, dials, and a central, ornate clock face.
- Atmosphere: The room is dimly lit by eerie, floating orbs of greenish light that hover just above the floor. The air is heavy with the scent of old metal and an occasional gust of cold wind.

Puzzle Mechanics:

1. The Clockwork Mechanism:
- Gears and Dials: The central mechanism has several large, interlocking gears and dials that need to be adjusted. Each dial has strange symbols and runes, and the gears move slowly but steadily. The clock face has twelve sections, each marked with different arcane symbols.

2. The Runic Pattern:
- Floor Runes: The runes on the floor around the clockwork mechanism are part of a larger, glowing pattern. They seem to correspond with the symbols on the dials. The runes pulse in rhythm, suggesting a hidden sequence or timing mechanism.

3. The Puzzle Objective:
- Goal: To solve the puzzle and open the doors, the characters need to align the clockwork mechanism so that the symbols on the clock face match a specific pattern visible on the floor runes. The correct alignment will activate ancient wards that unlock the doors.

4. Clues and Interaction:
- Clue 1 – Rune Alignment: An inscription on the wall hints at the need to “Set the time to the eternal hour of the pharaoh.” Observing the runes on the floor reveals that they form a clock pattern with a specific arrangement of symbols. Investigation DC 18
- Clue 2 – Light and Shadow: The glowing orbs occasionally shift, casting shadows that briefly align with the symbols on the dials. Observing these shadows helps the characters discern the correct symbols to align. Perception DC 20

5. Solution Steps:
- Step 1: Characters must decipher the pattern of symbols on the floor to determine the correct alignment of the clock face. They need to rotate the dials to match these symbols. Int (History) DC 23
- Step 2: Once the dials are correctly set, the characters need to manipulate the large gears. Each gear must be turned in a specific direction to engage with the clockwork mechanism properly. DC 15 Str (Athletics) check for each gear (6 gears must be turned)
- Step 3: As the characters adjust the gears and dials, the clockwork mechanism will slowly align. When the correct symbol pattern is achieved, the clock face will emit a bright, greenish glow.

6. Consequences of Failure:
- Trap Activation: If the characters make too many incorrect adjustments, the room may trigger defensive mechanisms, such as releasing a cloud of necrotic gas or summoning shadowy guardians to challenge the intruders.

7. Exit Mechanism:
- Unlocking the Doors: Once the clockwork mechanism is correctly aligned, the room's walls will shudder, and the exit doors will slide open with a deep, resonant click. The light orbs will intensify briefly before dimming, signaling the puzzle's completion.

This puzzle combines observation, pattern recognition, and a bit of mechanical manipulation, making it an engaging challenge for your players.

Riddle of the Eternal Clockwork:
*In the heart of darkness, where shadows play,
A clockwork marvel stands, its secrets in array.
Twelve faces of power, each marked by fate,
Align them true, and the doors shall gate.
Observe the runes, they pulse and glow,
Their pattern tells the tale, as time does flow.
Eternal hour of the pharaoh's reign,
Set the dials, let the gears strain.
Light and shadow dance, a fleeting clue,
Watch them closely, what do they pursue?
Turn the gears with strength and mind,
For only then will the path unwind.
When the clock face glows, the puzzle's done,
And the ancient wards, their silence won.
Open the doors, and step beyond,
Where secrets lie, and treasures bond.*

Explanation:

- First Stanza: Hints at the room's atmosphere and the central clockwork mechanism.
- Second Stanza: Directs the players to observe the runes on the floor and their pulsing pattern, which corresponds to the clock face.
- Third Stanza: References the inscription about setting the clock to the "eternal hour of the pharaoh," guiding them to the correct alignment of symbols.
- Fourth Stanza: Encourages the players to watch the light and shadow from the orbs, which provide additional clues.
- Fifth Stanza: Emphasizes the need to turn the gears with both strength and intelligence.
- Sixth Stanza: Describes the visual cue of the clock face glowing when the puzzle is solved and the doors opening.

Sea of fallen stars

Sunday, March 19, 2023 2:04 AM

This is where the elemental war began. A single mysterious figure arrives to a meeting between the three candidates: Dragons, Giants, Genies, and the gods and challenged them all. They then brought dozens of meteors down destroying mountain ranges and creating the canyon that when filled is the sea of fallen stars.

Kingdom of Lunadora in the west on what was previously known as Dragon Isle. The largest island in the sea was normally held by the strongest (above water) force in the sea. Has been held by dragons, pirate captains, and four degenerates notably.

Vast underwater sea elf kingdom in the east is named Wavecrest.

In a shadowy isle near the center of the sea is an island held by Ulgar. It has many names, Isle of Werewolves, Shadowisle. Before Ulgar's conquest of the island it had a bridge to a nearby island which was destroyed by Ulgar himself. Ulgar then blanketed the island in a permanent shadow.

Fields of limbo

Tuesday, August 1, 2023 2:46 PM

Area has been ravaged by magical energy.

Warring nation of mages each led by differing kings of arcane warlords led to utter devastation and a bleak dry landscape where nearly nothing grows. Plague and famine haunts the area but it has the richest residuum deposits on the continent. Seems to be why the Pharaoh of ash and dust is attempting to expand into the area.

In the plains of limbo he hears that the lands were decimated, swords stick up from the land in one valley that was "cleansed/blessed". In this valley of purgatory "Life may enter, but may never leave, death entered once and hasn't left". Some magical energy yet not necessarily arcane energy caused all life to mutated into twisted unknown versions of their past self. When slain these mutants never died "naturally" they disintegrated into a pink opaque dust and this dust would cling to the land and animals walking over it and would begin the cycle of mutation over again. Before the area was cleansed the remnants of the already fractured empires on all sides of the valley sent endless crusades to expel these unnatural creatures created by some magic mutation. This led to humanoids being mutated into undying aberration springing up as well as their swords stayed in the ground as most didn't have opposable fingers anymore. There is a large religious population in the area that are devoted to Zeisis, The Reaper who is said to have manifested an avatar over this area of things that never died fully (he came looking for souls when he heard the ringing at death's door, but never found anything. Zeisis' avatar outlined the valley of purgatory, sometimes called the land of the spirit swords by the faithful, banished life from entering the area, any living being, no matter its type, that steps foot in the area instantly and permanently becomes a ghost/spirit and is unable to leave the bounded area.

The Vanguard: Started by Ali, Troph, and Kitalsi.

- This group and its members act as a sort of spy infiltrating the workforce of cities and nations where there is great class disparity. They rally the anger of the workers against those who exploit them. They are the freedom fighters in a necessary violent revolution to end the wealth gap and after the rich are taken down by any means necessary the wealth found is redistributed. Kitalsi has been the one taking charge of the underdark nations. Dismantling the drow nation whose capitol is in Menzoberranzan by rallying the deep gnomes and all slaves who have been raided and captured by the greed of the drow to advance their own familys power within the drow nation. Through Trophs connection to the Monastery of Malevolence and Mercy and his rising idol status, as well as Ali's true nature as a Janni they are easily able to turn the hearts of the lower class. However, just because the ruling class is dismantled doesn't mean the city is a utopia afterwards. Often The Vanguard leaves the local politics to the people who lived there already and this may or may not lead to long lasting prosperity. Sometimes the locals turn to anarchy, other times a true stateless, classless nation is built on the ashes of the old.

Ancient Najara

Thursday, November 2, 2023 6:13 AM

In age of division the great underground kingdom was intellectually advanced empire of snakefolk, the Najara.

Studied cosmology and astronomy to an extreme degree focusing largely on the plane of earth due to contacting both xiomorns and dao while carving out their empire underground. This focus heavily shifted to far realm, the Rithmiasphere and extraterrestrial planets and systems after they discovered stardust deep underground.

What happened to the xiomorns. Xiomorns were an ancient esoteric race of underdark dwellers. They forged mighty artifacts and crafted the crystal crossroads to connect their empires while skipping over the vast oceans. The snakefolk were a close ally and benefited heavily from the demiplanes made by the xiomorns but when the underground empire was corrupted by an ideology to “reach the stars” they went to war with the kingdom of land and water but first slaughtered the xiomorns and stole as much of their items and research. The expertise of the xiomorns in conjuring demiplanes has led some to believe that a few still exist somewhere.

In the ruins of ssehethi that the four degens explored they found some of these cosmic biological experiments in which the father of spiders was their attempt at creating a broodspawner which they saw as a way to reproduce faster and eliminate adolescence because the broodspawner would pass on “adaptions” which the Najara believed would mean intelligence and their collective knowledge. However the first time it was used the test went haywire. In an attempt to reverse engineer the broodspawner reptilian dna was mixed with scourge broodling alien/insect DNA creating the first spiders. The “aether chain” that was powering the new life form pumped energy constantly and started an infinite while loop of spider spawning. The one bright side is that this chain kept the father of spiders contained inside its tomb.

After all this still seeking the star most Najara snakefolk have vanished through abandoned portals to worlds beyond Rithmia. They conquerer the third planet from the sun, a hot tropical planet filled with all kinds of reptilian creatures.

Forgotten sands

Wednesday, November 1, 2023

11:01 PM

Dotted with vast catacombs from the legendary underground kingdom from the age of division that the sole surviving exterior fortress is a smooth Egyptian style pyramid among a sea of sand

https://gregreese.substack.com/p/sar-scan-of-khafre-pyramid-shows?publication_id=706779&post_id=159281192&triedRedirect=true

Article is titled Synthetic Aperture Radar Doppler Tomography Reveals Details of Undiscovered High-Resolution Internal Structure of the Great Pyramid of Giza.

There should be tons of pyramids jutting up from the sands but these are just the roofs/caps of vast underground networks.

From the substack article "Near the base of the pyramid, 5 identical structures are seen, connected by geometric pathways. Inside each of these are 5 horizontal levels and a sloping roof.

Below these 5 structures are 8 cylindrical structures which appear to be vertical wells, hollow inside, and surrounded by descending spiral pathways. These 8 vertically aligned cylindrical structures, arranged in two parallel rows from north to south, descend to a depth of 648 meters where they all merge into two large cubic structures measuring approximately 80 meters per side."

An entire campaign can take place down here and it could be a fully underground forgotten aetherpunk setting (powered by etherite) that as you venture deeper more and more lost creatures and treasures appear. Royalty of the underground kingdom would be furthest below the surface and average people would be closer to the surface so the beginning would be large marketplaces but once you descend the massive cylinders it gets more ornate and weird.

The Dragon Empire

Wednesday, March 6, 2024 8:33 PM

Established after the Elemental War by a noble Gold Dragon, Ceolruleid, The Unhesitant Protector, who created the first mighty union between metallic, chromatic and gem dragons. All of a lawful nature they decided to create a grand empire that could withstand a great cataclysm like the ones forced upon them by the gods just 50 years beforehand. Gold (LG) Green (LE) and either emerald or ruby (LN). They believed their adherence to law could help them overcome the moral differences they shared. Three branches of government were created and each draconic group ruled over one with checks and balances between the three to ensure stability of the nation.

- LG: Gold - Executive branch
- LN: Gem (Emerald or ruby) - Judicial branch
- LE: Green - Legislative branch

These colors are present in the flag of the empire:

- Verdant green background
- Bright red sun in the upper right corner
- A long golden dragon snaking from the bottom left diagonally to the top right mouth open like it is about to consume the sun

All the founding dragons serve as the head of their branch and choose their own ways of running their branch.

- The founding gold dragon continues to rule as the sole leader of the executive branch for centuries to come
- As worthy dragons/humanoids arise who are wholly bound to the law (like sky breakers) they are appointed, two at a time, as judges so the court system has varying numbers of judges over the course of the coming centuries. With the "wisest" Gem dragon serving as the "Eternal Tie Breaker" making sure there is always an odd number of judicators.
- The founding green dragon tires of ruling democratically and rules the legislative branch in secret. Allowing people to elect local leaders to be a part of the legislative branch. This branch has the largest number of members that begin infighting and disrupting the government as a whole. However the founding green dragon culls from the shadows keeping the best interest of the land over the populace of their empire.

An interesting dichotomy would be the gold dragon / executive branch cares more for the people and the Green / legislative branch doesn't care for the people as much but does try to protect the jungles/forests at the expense of the people good of expanding the empire.

Over the course of the next few centuries the dragons grew more and more fond of their subjects creating a tight bond with the mortals of the land. Many draconic sorcerer families are born and rise to great status. In the fall of the great dragon empire the land was shattered and splintered amongst decedents.

Two of the eldest (oldest was a woman but first born boy was second oldest so both have claims in their eyes) bordered each other and warred for centuries and turned towards malevolent means for fighting

One sibling ruled a nation of undead the other ruled a nation of robots two everlasting servants of war.

The Founding Dragons:

Gold: Ceolruleid, The Unhesitant Protector, was one of the few ancient dragons alive at the end of the elemental war (not selected to become a deity in the elemental energy plane). As his title suggests this gold dragon not only had golden scales but a heart of gold as well. They sought the protection and happiness of all creatures no matter how much smaller than him they were. At already ~800 years old this dragon served as the benevolent ruler of the executive branch of the empire for 400 years in which they stopped being an ancient dragon and became a Great Wym. This marked the end of its physical and mental development. Fearing that this would lead to stagnation and regressivism the Gold dragon had to decide between their various offspring to choose a successor. Lots of interesting stories to be told with this. Maybe the green dragon manipulates one of the offspring to gain a puppet in a second branch of government. This does not have to happen quickly as Gold dragons can live up to 4400 years barring intervention. However once a successor is chosen Ceolruleid wills its spirit to depart and "dies" but becomes a guardian of the land. Their spirit seems to permeate all edges of the empire but is strongest in the mountains surrounding the capitol.

Green: Chiarrayth, The Viridescent Viper was a young adult dragon during the founding. Unusually cunning for her age he is actually quite a hermit and would rather stay to themselves in the forest and use their intellect to hunt however after a chance encounter with Ceolruleid they found themselves oddly infatuated with the goal of "breaking" the gold dragon of their purely good ways and will go to great lengths to shatter the positive outlook of the gold dragon to the point where they feel they can't die happy until they've seen a broken Ceolruleid.

Wild west theme west of the mountains but in the valley we should work in a eastern African theme with this being the rift valley. Possibly a strong isolationist nation like the Ethiopian Empire this being a theocracy of divine soul sorcerers said to be descended from a god (Ados / Gharian). This nation should have long standing beef with Brhymn a newer nation in comparison but a rival theocracy.

A (western African) inspired kingdom that reavers metallurgical prowess above all else. They were the first peoples to discover brass and many other metallic alloys. They are ruled by a black smith king the royal family are specialized golem crafters creating works of art that are living functional metal golems. They have an abundance of valuable metals like copper iron etc which has invited many invaders to attempt to conquer them yet they stand tall. It would also be interesting if these peoples were "dispossessed" not valuing personal property they see all that comes from the land as theirs, they share, and all work to improve life through things from the land so people take pride in trades like farming weaving blacksmithing and anything that creates from natural materials.

Very central american themed with lots of animal kin.
Pre-columbian americas. Naturalist values, animalism to an extent.

They should have a heavy respect for their dead and create many mummies like ancient americans (Paleoindians) did.

Based on history of the Meztica (Mesoamerican), Aztec, Olmec, Incan, Andean, as well as a variety of North American natives

Regular animals in the area should be:

- Vicuna

Things to use as inpiration

- Tres Zapotes
- La Venta
- Olmec city of San Lorenzo
- Mixtec

The map to the right is the continent during the Age of Division. After the world tree see is planted the windswept wastes and paturage steppe become hallowed grounds for the Eun'sur and the church of Gaia as they nurtured the seed for 1000 years where thereafter it took only 1 year for the tree to grow from its seed and sprout from the ground into it's full form which is thousands of feet tall. Taller than the pillars of restraint. It pierces into the clouds. The Paturage Steppe and Windswept Wastes turn into lush green gardens, a beautifully shaded verdant expanse, as the clouds themselves seem to be pulled towards the gravity of the world tree. Some of the druids even migrate underground as the world tree's roots extend nearly 100ft underground and spread for 1/2 a mile around almost into the underdark itself.

During the age of division a majority of animal folk and their allies departed from Yadrella and travelled south east and founded The Azula Empire

They travelled inland via the "Azula Gorge", the river/ocean extension that travels inland from the west and almost bisects the continent. They settled mostly on the north side given the south side, now called "The Bayou" was a swampy expanse of trecherous land.

They moved into the mountains and spread from their.

Since the Azula Empire was founded by animal folk most formed packs and travelled together however, their all put forward a tribal representative in the empire and the central government, based in Ruby's Crest, was founded as the first Republic in Rithmia's history. They realized how important the fertile lands surrounding the gorge would be and allowed tribes to spread out with promise that they would supply goods to all who spread through fair trade and commerce.

The governing council of the republic is known as the Summit Accord and it has 11 members from the 11 land based animal folk subspecies.

Jericho's Ladder

Thursday, May 23, 2024 3:40 PM

Somewhere in the vast southern ocean a mythic pale ivory tower is said to be nearly a thousand feet tall. No one knows where it is as some say it only appears to those "with a clear conscious" or "with a defined purpose"

This is a spire the was the original nexus to Gaia's home plane. When each divinity was terraforming their planet each one left a specific nexus connecting to their home in the outer planes

Gaia's original nexus take the user to The Outlands maybe even connecting straight to the spire in the center of that plane. Now the gate to the outlands is guarded by a sphynx who challenges all those who to games of mind boyd and soul

This has become a point of pilgrimage for followers of Gharian as an ideal of the faith is "no regrets" so seeing the tower is a proof of clear conscious. It is ultimately an excuse to travel and live as they please.

Deities

Saturday, February 18, 2023 6:32 AM

Deities undergo a process similar to lichdom ascension. However they bind a plane to themselves like a phylactery and don't feed souls to it instead the domain that they subject to their rule feeds them through mortals simply completing the acts of their edicts. Prayers also feed the deity as well and bolster their strength in a distinct way. This distinction means that a Connection is made between the mortal and the god allowing the god to bring that mortal soul to their plane upon dying ending their cycle of rebirth but again bolstering the control over their domain and plane.

Druid

Saturday, February 18, 2023 6:33 AM

Potion is normal however Druids are required to split the potion between themselves and pouring some on the ground they have enchanted

Phylactery is a grove filled with plants animals the Druid has a connection with. At the center of this grove the Druid must enchant the land in the following ways:

- Erect a circle of standing stones.
- Enchant the land with Druid grove for 7 days in a row (at level 7 each time). After this one of the Druid grove effect become permanent as a new lair action for the lich

The ritual is similar to what vampires go through.

The Druid must bury themselves with in the center of the standing stones they erected through their primal magic and consume half the potion and pour the rest around their new grave. The body dies and the soul is absorbed by the enchanted grove and the body is reborn around 24 hours later. Destroying the grove with fire or blight will stop the lich from reguvenating but will not kill them outright. The lich can spend a full week casting Druid grove again to rebuild their grove before their body fades. If a Druids grove or standing stones are destroyed and not repaired is when Druidic liches descend to demiliches.

After the ritual the standing stones become immune to physical damage.

Understanding the Divine Through Lichdom

Saturday, February 8, 2025 12:26 PM

Artifact, Book

Book written by a scholar late in the age of myth. A study to understand what the gods actually were at a base level using the path of lichdom as a study guide of sorts since it was the only way for mortals to achieve immortality without the help of a deity. This scholar studies various classes and how they attain lichdom (mostly spell caster classes like wizard druid sorcerer and warlock)

Kitalsi the the focus of the Druid section but they also theorize about Ki'Una being a Druid in life based on references to an arch Druid of the circle of the moon whose name has been erased from all texts and is heard as a whisper if spoken in Druidic.

The vanguard is the strongest of the common people who fight to overthrow tyranny and eradicate slavery, poverty, starvation. Originally Ali planned to start with Tantras and expand but noticed that as long as people nearby share the cruel tyrannical there will be militias and mercenaries bought to defend it down uprisings.

This faction acts as a rallying force but does it under the guise of political activism that only launch mass violent revolutions once they can hinder multiple cities in a region at once. The group will do things like feed the hungry open orphanages start small ranches and farms in rural areas since they have money most nobility is happy to accept them. However oppression early ends without violence and the vanguard realize this.

Solite

Saturday, March 1, 2025 9:38 AM

The discovery of this element will be the catalyst for bringing Rithmia into a solar punk age.

This orange metal has the ability to intake sunlight and channel it into energy. Much like a plant uses sunlight to photosynthesize Solite has an internal chemical (called phosatrape or phoskeraunos) process that converts sunlight into electrical discharge that can be harnessed and routed to power technology only using solar energy and some wires with Solite as the main conduit.

Initially it will work much like an alternator but throughout the solar age it will be refined to the point where it can be thinned out into a fabric like material and used as sails in flying ships or kept as rigid material and used as the exterior of buildings giving ships and buildings during this age a distinct orange glow.

Etherite

Saturday, March 1, 2025 9:48 AM

This is the element that will propel Rithmia into the industrial age/ steam powered age.

Etherite is a pale blue metal that when magical energy is applied directly to the metal it super heats itself creating a source of heat more efficient than fire (natural or magical) since the magic energy is converted at nearly 20x the rate to heat. With this artificers are able to create massive steam engines with little magical energy expended and only moderate amounts of Etherite necessary.

I want to do a whole campaign about discovering this where the party has Godwins level 20 artificer as a group patron roughly 40/50 years after the end of the 4 degens campaign. That axolotl artificer, Shaebyn will have encountered some small bits and realized the magnification powers it hold and the possibilities that can be utilized through its extreme heat conversions capabilities. She will also have made the discovery that she is not the first Rithmian to try to harness this power as she believes the ancient snake empire of Najara used this element in a variety of ways thousands of years ago when that empire spanned the globe following their triumph at the end of the age of division. So she will send the party out on tomb raiding missions to hunt through the ancient ziggurats the dot the landscape of the forgotten coast of Bretoa. However, rivals and enemies will pop up to thwart the party on their journey but that won't be all. The ancient Najara empire will be revealed to be more advanced than previously thought. Etherite seemed to work as the mundane power source for every day utility but their vast arcane knowledge and a glimpse beyond the Rithmia sphere drove them to widespread panic. And an ancient enemy (who they prophesied to return but has now been wished away) drove them to flee the planet and develop world hopping capabilities. There should be hints that a Najara civilization still exists on a neighboring planet but the translation of Etherite to Aetherite should leave gaps in how this different element allowed for such vast technological leaps over the Etherite power that is just barely being rediscovered.

Opening meeting

Monday, October 2, 2023 12:05 PM

Regular meeting between the amethyst enclave about the pandemonium stone and using the inner elements to close off portals to outer plane. Towards the end Have the half Minotaur half Tiefling enter at the end when someone asks who the pandemonium stone should be delivered to.

This blood cleric of asmodeus is leading a crusade on the jaws of the earth where scourge have over run the area assimilating civilians into what has been deemed a "scourge thrall".

Overview

Sunday, October 1, 2023 9:25 AM

Residuum is the sprinkle of magic residue left after any spell is cast. Magic users pull aether from the weave of key lines encircling Rithmia. It is important to note that since the byproduct of magic is residuum that means they are using up the weave. Something's channel energy back into the weave. Specifically prayers and dedication to Xinthris but also Druids take time to feed the weave through occult rituals. Planar vortex's are an odd conduit. They draw energy from the weave and disperse it with a unique energy source connected to the plane. Currently the elemental plane is the strongest of these generators and are most common throughout the material plane. However if this continues over millennia arcane power won't be as strong but there will be an excess of this magic element residuum. This is what will eventually lead the humanoid's down the path of forging more and more elaborate items out of this material as the weave itself weakens; eventually leading to the ages of steampunk industrialization and even the cyberpunk space age class of weaponry as the world moves into those ages while planar portals close and lessen in number and pure aether becomes a rare commodity

In terms of brumestone it can work purely off residuum if the residuum is made into a copper wire type material and wrapped around the metal. Like wrapping a crystal in wire and these brumestone clusters can be connected via this residuum wire to create stronger floating machines.

Post-reckoning

Wednesday, May 1, 2024 7:04 PM

After the campaign and mini series large population begin to unify and the discovery of etherium a new ore that once refined (this should cause pollution) can be place near another crystal when heated move do something dope. Steam is used as because fire magic

This produced a different form of a residuum, an alloy that when used in place of one of the etherium crystals creates a near perpetual motion machine through magnetism and attractive forces

Axis

Friday, November 17, 2023 12:06 PM

Three axis of alignment are all scales

Good to evil

Lawful to chaotic (order to freedom)

Third axis is purely individual and that is the range of courage (achieve greatness or avoid disappointment) depending upon viewpoint this third axis could be selfish to selfless

Ideas

Saturday, January 6, 2024 3:44 PM

Each of the original 10 deities is the patron of a school of magic. This is why graviturgy and chronogury are lost forms of magic as there patrons were The messenger and The frigid respectively

Th Weave

Saturday, April 19, 2025 9:31 AM

Xinthris crafted the weave to bestow the gift of magic and spellcasting to the mortals of Rithmia. The weave itself is a blanket of pure arcane energy. It is not made up of one material but all of the gods essences from their various planes and god metals mixed together. When a demigod is raised the weave is partially rewritten to add the new gods essence into the weave itself.

At its core spell craft is “geometric creativity” all manner of magic is possible by “weaving” together particular symbols/glyphs/runes (somatic components). These weaves are sometimes ingrained in language as a sort of translation of the weave to speech (verbal components). Physical ingredients can sometimes bolster or alter the previous two ingredients to give the final weave enhancement (material components).

Core Magical Elements

Each school of Magic has a core element that forms the back bones of its more powerful rituals and therefore can lead to enhanced spellcraft if wielding properly by the mage.

Frozen wastes

Tuesday, May 14, 2024 7:07 PM

During the age of myth the goliaths and the ice giants of Bretoa exiled criminals to this land.

It is hard to tell where the ice ends and the land begins. There is ground under all the ice but the only other feature is just a small mountain range that pokes out of the ice at the exact north pole which is the center of the frozen wastes. Scattered around this mountain range is where the Demigates reside

The Demi gates

Tuesday, May 14, 2024 7:09 PM

These “gates” are large imprints in the land resembling Nazca lines when approached by a cleric or paladin of a certain caliber (or anyone who the demigod believes has earned entrance) a gate to their demigods realm is said to appear before them. Other gods have sites like this where heralds appear but the demigods have no heralds and allow mortals to willingly join their extradimensional forces but they must forfeit life on Rithmia.

Campaign hooks

Monday, March 17, 2025 1:59 PM

"In the frozen wastes, the arctic lich waits.

A whisper of death in the howling wind.

Its touch colder than the grave.

Its gaze the last thing you'll feel."

Basically an arctic lich lives in a frozen tomb near the edge of the continent. Inside a glacial rift constantly surrounded by a veil of blizzard.

Raises undead exiled prisoners from Salphas to amass his army for an eventual invasion of the northern continents.

Godmetals are natural metals /elements that have specific potent reactions when magic energy is forced into them.

A more precise name for these metals would be planar metals. They aren't directly created by or come from a deity but they are abundant and naturally occurring in each inner and outer plane.

Residuum

Thursday, October 31, 2024 4:03 PM

Residuum is technically a god metal alloy of Gaia's true god metal

It has a different reaction over time based on the magic it absorbs. It comes from the Elemental energy plane and is most commonly transformed in the EEP but near vortex's to the EEP this metal can seep in the Rithmia's soil.

the final stage of residuum enhancement is the ability for your items now have the ability to damage and shatter magic items becoming anti-magic of sorts (only works on magic items of rare or lower rating)

Chlorophyte

Thursday, October 31, 2024 4:06 PM

The Feywild - Chlorophyte

As with nearly everything that originates from the feywild, chlorophyte is alive. This dark green material originates from densely packed organic materials that lie deep within the ground of the Feywild, infused with the magics that give nearly everything on the plane life, chlorophyte is the simplest of life forms on the plane of existence, hardly considered "living" but able to grow and survive nonetheless. It is basically a metallic plant that does not need soil to "live"

While underground, this material is sustained by the organic materials within the earth as well as the magic of the plane, however, when removed and given sunlight, chlorophyte glows a much brighter green, and begins to feed.

Chlorophyte's unique blend of organic and inorganic qualities lend towards its dangerous efficacy as a weapon. Once they have been exposed to any amount of sunlight, chlorophyte weapons will eat away at opponents by implanting chlorophyte spores within them, which spread over time. Chlorophyte armor damages weapons or opponents that make physical contact in the same way, growing exponentially once spores are planted. If not quickly burned away or otherwise disposed of, chlorophyte spores will eventually devour the entire being or object they are planted within, making more chlorophyte in the process.

Nullium

The Shadowfell - Nullium

Nullium comes from rather simple origins, though it is rather rare on the plane of existence that it originates from. The fundamental magical energies of the Shadowfell exude darkness and decay. In such an environment, weak stone, rotted wood, stale air, and lifeless dirt are often all that exist, with little chance of a hardy material like metal forming. However, near planar portals that connect the material to the Shadowfell, a small amount of light creeps in, allowing the formation of more familiar materials. In these areas, metal that has been corrupted by the endless void of darkness within the Shadowfell can form.

Nullium is unique in that it is not only infused with the thick and malleable shadows of the Shadowfell, but it is strengthened by them. Illusionist wizards specifically know the power that these shadows can hold, and adept casters can manipulate this metal with ease, forming it into any shape or function they would like. Nullium is particularly good at spreading darkness and cutting through areas of light while in weapon form, and stronger magic items that include Nullium can shift between visible and invisible at the user's will. While wearing Nullium armor, an adventurer might notice that shadows almost seem to cling to their body, giving them a natural stealthiness and allowing them to become nearly invisible within darkness. The wearer is also considerably protected from hostile radiant energy.

Ectopium

Thursday, October 31, 2024 4:08 PM

The Ethereal Plane - Ectopium

Adventurers, wizards and wanderers are often familiar with the odd realm of the Ethereal Plane. A plane of existence that directly borders the physical world, but where one can manifest as a mysterious, invisible, and incorporeal figure, free to travel and move in any way they please.

However, travelers who have strayed too far into the mists of the Border Ethereal know that there is a darker, much less traveled interior of the plane. The Deep Ethereal is home to objects, energy, and even beings, that are almost entirely enigmatic. Dense ethereal energy, against all odds, forms a material with weight, mass, and physical properties. All objects and beings in the Deep Ethereal are made of this substance, Ectopium, much to the dismay of those who may have assumed themselves safe from physical harm in this plane.

Ectopium is a unique, gelatinous, translucent gray solid, that constantly undergoes sublimation while outside of the Deep Ethereal plane. Within seconds, small samples of Ectopium will wisp into nothingness, and within minutes, the same will happen to any amount of the material. Care must be taken to seal the material properly within a container, and to use it as fast as possible when it is exposed.

Ectopium can be worked into any malleable substance, giving the material a faint blue glow after the process is complete. When used in a weapon, the weapon can be used to damage creatures and objects that are currently located within the Ethereal plane, and when used in armor, the user gains the ability to physically interact with, but not damage, the same creatures and objects.

Ectopium can also be used in potions and magical items that allow travel to the ethereal plane, or the summoning of creatures native to it, making the processes much easier and cutting costs considerably.

Prismetal

The Astral Plane - Prismetal

Prismetal is the result of the multiplanar influence that shows itself in many areas of the Astral plane. With so many color pools leading to different outer planes, several locations have influence pouring in from 3 or more planes of existence, leading to a sort of magical accumulation over time. This accumulation forms into crystals of Prismetal, which have physical and magical properties that are unique to nearly every sample.

Prismetal is multicolored based on the planar energies which created it. It also has effects based on these colors, of which there are 8. Prismetal of 2 colors or 3 is common, and much weaker than those with more colors. 8-colored prismetal is known as True Prismetal, and is exceedingly rare. Prismetal of any type blends together the properties of each of the colors it contains, often producing magical effects that are entirely unique, and always powerful.

The odds of a piece of prismetal being 2-8 colors is detailed below:

Beirtzium

Thursday, October 31, 2024 4:06 PM

Mt. Heaven - Beirtzium

Mount Heaven is a plane of order and perfection, home of the angels and all other arbiters of justice and divine law. Such a location, while advocating for pacifism, is not above using force to employ the ideals of goodness across the realms. The materials that are used to wage war in the name of peace tend to vary, as the many servants of good are not picky with what they use to ruthlessly murder dissidents and heretics fight evil. However, for those who wish to make their universal laws multiversal, and aspire to be as petty and vindictive as the gods above them, Beirtzium, aka Hallowed Steel is the only option.

Beirtzium is blessed to protect from the worst forces of evil, and to rend the worst devils from the evil that has given them life. Although it is simple in appearance, this bright, platinum-colored metal holds enough good energy within it to be vile to evil creatures, and to naturally shift anyone holding it towards the Lawful Good alignment. Under the proper circumstances, this material is also extremely volatile when making contact with sufficiently evil creatures, however, most craftsmen tend to work the steel to a strength that will prevent explosions in these scenarios. Variations of weapons that take advantage of this property, however, are dubbed "Holy Hand Grenades".

Gem dragons

Tuesday, June 18, 2024 11:43 PM

These dragons resemble eastern dragons, they have no wings, and flying with telekinesis

Origins

Friday, April 25, 2025 2:35 PM

The first dragon seeds were “planted” by Gaia herself and she still refers to dragons as her children.

The first dragons born from these seeds are now referred to as primeval or first generation dragons. These dragons could not change their forms into humanoids and lived much much longer than later counterparts. Some say the earth dragon god, the last brown dragon is of this generation.

Second generation dragons were the first able to shapeshift into humanoids

Third generation is when dragons gained control over a singular element all dragons now are of the third generation

A draconic generation spans nearly 10000 years
